

TWO KILLED IN DICKINSON TORNADO

FREIGHT TRAIN WRECK HOLDS UP TRAINS

HEAVY LOSS CAUSED HERE WHEN WIND, HAIL, RAIN STORM STRIKES CITY; WORST RAIN IN MANY YEARS

More Than Inch of Rain Falls Within 20 Minutes and Wind Reaches Velocity of 65 Miles an Hour Before Weather Bureau Instruments Are Destroyed—Hail Storm Apparently Covers Limited Area, Not Reaching North, Central Burleigh County, and But Short Distance East of Bismarck—Scores of Windows Are Broken in Bismarck.

The wind, hail and rain storm, which struck Bismarck late yesterday afternoon, was described by weather bureau officials today as the worst hail storm in many years, and the cloudburst which struck the city shortly after 5 o'clock last evening probably the worst the city has experienced.

Within twenty minutes 1.16 inches of rain fell, weather bureau reports showed. Total rainfall in Bismarck was 1.79 inches, the bureau reports today show.

The area of the storm apparently was limited. It came from the southwest, and windward in the path of the driving hail from this direction were shattered.

Storm Goes Northeast The hail storm extended north and east of Bismarck for 30 miles, according to Weather Observer Roberts. The last house reached by telephone by Mr. Roberts was that of Edward Lundquist, 30 miles north and east of Bismarck. He reported that there was a heavy hail storm there. Farmers could not determine the damage because the fields were covered with water, he said. He estimated the rainfall at two inches. The rainfall, according to Mr. Roberts, was heavier northeast of Bismarck than in the city.

The North Soo train spent the night at Baldwin, two miles of track being under water about Breen, a few miles north of here. Northern Pacific train No. 4, due here at 7:23 o'clock last night, was at Sweet Briar, west of Mandan, all night, as a result of a washout. Few windows were broken and no serious hail damage was reported there.

The rain fell in torrents in two storms, one about 4 o'clock, Mandan time, and the other, part of the Dickinson storm, about 6 o'clock. Water poured from the hills and converted Sixth avenue into a mill race. Sixth avenue has 18-inch curbs, being paved to care for such emergencies, and the water filled the street and overflowed on the sidewalk. Storm sewers six feet in diameter also are constructed to care for heavy flows of water. These sewers choked at the Northern Pacific tracks, diverting water on Main street and First street.

The basements of the Nigey and Klondike hotels were flooded, and the Lewis and Clark hotel basement had about 18 inches in it. It was reported, the postoffice basement was flooded, the barbershop of Frank Dowd in the basement of the Farmers bank building was filled with water and many other basements flooded.

Because of two similar storms within ten years, Mandan merchants generally had protected their shops so that there was not great damage. The hail fell only for 10 or 15 minutes, and was not severe. There was no hail in the second storm.

About 500 feet of track was washed out on the Northern Pacific at Sweet Briar, west of Mandan, Northern Pacific train No. 4 being held up there most of the night. The stockyards at Sunny, west of Mandan, burned yesterday. The loss was estimated at about $10,000. The fire resulted when a building was struck by lightning. A grain and hay barn and part of the pens were saved. Lumber was being shipped in today by the Northern Pacific for the purpose of rebuilding the pens.

Rainfall was 2.03 inches.

Grain Grading Fund Case Is Filed in Court

Issuing an alternative writ of mandamus, Judge Jansons of district court set June 28 as the day for hearing issues involved in a suit brought on the relation of J. N. Hagan, supervisor of grades, weights and measures, against John Stoen, as state treasurer. The question to be determined in the suit is whether $15,000, left in the treasury as the unexpended balance of the grain grading fund when it was under the railroad commission should properly be credited to the grain grading department created by an initiated law.

Loss on glass of both companies is insured. The conservatory of C. B. Little was badly damaged.

Road Undermined A concrete culvert on the concrete road to the bridge was not large enough to hold the water that rushed through it, and the water began undermining the earth embankment. Planking was placed across to permit passage of vehicles, and watchmen stationed there by the police. The bottoms were flooded by the downpour.

WATER RUSHES DOWN MANDAN'S SIXTH AVENUE

Sewers Choked and Water Is Diverted Into Main Street in That City

LITTLE HAIL DAMAGE

Mandan was visited by two distinct cloudbursts, but the city escaped the heavy hail damage visited on Bismarck. Few windows were broken and no serious hail damage was reported there.

The rain fell in torrents in two storms, one about 4 o'clock, Mandan time, and the other, part of the Dickinson storm, about 6 o'clock. Farmer Victim of Storm

ONE MAN HURT, OTHERS MAY BE DEAD IN WRECK

Extra Freight Train Goes in Ditch Three Miles East of Bismarck Early Today

CARS ARE PILED UP

Traffic of Through Trains Is Held Up as a Result of The Wreckage

Twenty freight cars were piled up at a point about 3 miles east of here at 3:50 o'clock this morning when a Northern Pacific freight train was wrecked.

The wreck was caused by undermining of the track by water rushing off the embankment. The engine passed over the bad place in the track, but the cars which followed it were piled up in all directions.

Ben Loomis of Nampa, Idaho, said to be stealing a ride on the train, suffered a broken leg. This was the only injury reported by trainmen.

The freight train, extra No. 1702, east bound, was traveling along at only a fair rate of speed. The wreck held up Northern Pacific passenger train No. 4, due here at 7:23 o'clock last night, which reached Mandan about 5 o'clock this morning after having been held up at Sweet Briar because of a washout.

A wrecking crew was summoned to begin clearing the tracks east of here, and effort was to be made to salvage grain and other merchandise.

May Be Two Dead

The possibility of two persons being dined in the wreck was advanced by a brakeman. He said that he saw a couple of youths get on the train to steal a ride, being on top of a coal car, and that presumably they were on the train when it was wrecked. The coal car toppled over and a good part of it is under water. Two bodies may be found when the car is lifted.

The wreck, which occurred on the flat east of the penitentiary, is surrounded by water, the flat being a small lake.

All trans-continental trains are held up until the wreck is cleared, and it is doubtful if there will be any trains in or out of Bismarck until tomorrow morning.

Lucky to Escape

The engine passed over a small culvert, on the ties, having gone off the rails. Only the guard rails kept it from plunging off the track and perhaps fatally injuring the engineer and fireman.

Loss Is $700,000 Two wrecking crews were engaged in cleaning up the wreck this afternoon. It was estimated by railroad men that the loss to the Northern Pacific was at least $700,000. It appeared doubtful if the wreck could be cleaned up within two days.

Mail was carried from the Bismarck postoffice to Menoken this afternoon, and put on No. 8, and mailed from here to Mandan to be put on train there.

MURDERS' LONG LIST

New York, June 19—American police records show at least 10,000 murder cases every year, according to a report of Dr. Frederick L. Hoffman, statistician.

Minnesota is the Sioux word for cloudy or smoky water.

YOUNG BISMARCKERS UP EARLY TO MAKE PROFITS FROM THE STORM

Young Bismarck is wide awake. Early this morning doorbells in the northern part of the city were ringing.

"Say, mister," piped up a small voice, "Rake the leaves off your lawn for 25 cents."

Several boys, it developed, were out bright and early seeking to earn small bits of money for helping to clean up the visible effects of the hail storm.

A trial was stopped in the courtroom by the storm. Hail smashed in windows and glass began flying across the room. The jurors were in no mood to listen to evidence. Judge Jansons adjourned court.

The telephone girls also caught the brunt of the storm. After the lightning and rain had passed, the telephone girls were delayed with calls—one neighbor to another, a business man calling his home, or some other one concerned with the effect of the storm. The load of the company quadrupled. It was estimated that 4,000 telephone calls were handled between 6 and 8 p. m.

SEVENTH BANK IS REOPENED

Bank of Hamilton, Pembina County, Does Business Again

The Bank of Hamilton, Pembina county, reopened today, is the seventh North Dakota closed bank to reopen since March 1, according to officials of the state banking department. It was placed on special deposit October 28 last, had $20,000 capital and deposits of $139,000.

The Bank of Hamilton is one of the oldest banks in the state, and it is understood that its reopening on a solid foundation was largely the work of C. R. Green, manager of the Bank of North Dakota, who was moved somewhat by sentiment, as he was active in the bank several years ago.

Mr. Green formerly was the bank's president, but had not taken part in the management for several years, and held only a nominal interest in it when it closed. Nevertheless, according to banking department officials, he refinanced the bank, placing it on a solid foundation.

"Not a cent of Bank of North Dakota money went into the bank," said Gilbert Semington, state examiner. "Mr. Green acted purely as an individual."

There are almost 2,500,000 persons employed in the motor industry and allied lines.

C. O. ENGDahl, PIONEER, FOUND DEAD IN FIELD

May Have Been Struck By Lightning or Drowned in a Rushing Torrent

CORONER VISITS SCENE

Examination to be Made to Determine the Exact Cause of His Death

The death of C. O. Engdahl, whose body was found on his farm northeast of here, was caused by drowning, Coroner Gobel announced after physicians had conducted an examination this afternoon.

C. O. Engdahl, 65 years old, pioneer farmer of Trygg township, who has been a resident of this state for 42 years, was overcome by the storm yesterday, and his body found about a mile from home. He is believed to have been drowned, but until the examination to be performed this afternoon is completed, whether he was drowned or killed by lightning will not be definitely known.

Deputy Sheriff Kafer and County Coroner Gobel drove to the Engdahl farm this morning, and went over the ground with the sons and with Oscar Fred, who is renting the farm this year.

Between the two storms, Mr. Engdahl took a spade and went into his garden to drain the water off his strawberry patch. Mr. Engdahl was last seen by Mr. Fred, going over a hill in the direction of the section line road which runs through his farm. The Engdahl boys said that one of Mr. Engdahl's chores which he always performed himself, was to see that the culvert in this grade was kept free from debris.

He apparently made for this culvert, and after opening it, tried to recross the grade, when the second storm struck. He either became confused, or stepped off into deep water. The spade was found 20 feet from the culvert, lodged in a clump of willows, while the body was found about one-half mile south and east of the culvert, in a slough.

Mr. Engdahl had constructed a dam in his pasture, as a water retainer. Mr. Fred says that only a few minutes after he saw Mr. Engdahl go over the hill, the water was rushing over this dam in torrents.

The dam drains several sections of rough country, and a huge volume of water was soon pouring through the Engdahl pasture.

Struck or Stunned As several severe crashes of thunder were heard in the vicinity during the time, it is thought he may have been either struck or stunned by the lightning. The examination this afternoon will establish whether he was drowned or not. No inquest will be held, as the death was purely accidental.

Mr. Engdahl is survived by his wife, two sons, Victor and John, who reside in Trygg township, and by one daughter, Julia, of Orlando, Cal.

ROADS WERE LIKE CREEKS

Local People Drive to Bismarck Through Storm

About 25 Bismarck and Burleigh county people who attended the New Salem Holistic circuit annual picnic and tour yesterday, can testify that it rained west of the river.

P. J. Meyer, A. F. Bradley and H. S. Dobler came through from New Salem after the rain. At places, Mr. Meyer said, he could determine he was on the road only by the fence posts, and the hill by the Mandan courthouse resembled a rushing mountain creek. The party passed 20 cars in the ditch between Mandan and New Salem.

There was no hail west of Mandan. The bad condition of the roads the two or three days previous had cut down the attendance at New Salem, but a successful Holistic circuit picnic was held nevertheless.

Ad Club Program This first day of celebration is a part of the program of the Advertising Club to bring our townspeople and farmers closer together in a social way, to forget about business for a change. Some 2500 or 3000 invitations have been sent farmers within a radius of 30 miles of Bismarck to come here that day for a good time. It is up to the people of town to come down that day and help show everyone a good time so they will know that Bismarck is all right. We want everyone in this part of the State to speak of Bismarck and to think of Bismarck as being "Our Town" and it will be a big help to carry out that spirit if everyone will join in on this celebration. It isn't going to be a big one but it will be a lot of fun.

A small barn in the vicinity of Kluten, owned by Mrs. Gertrude Nelson, was hurled on top of a confectionary store owned by her and this morning a pig that had been in the barn was found on top of the store, unharmed. Several persons were cut by flying glass, none seriously.

LUMBER COMPANY EMPLOYEES ARE CRUSHED TO DEATH; 20 INJURED AS STORM SWEEPS THROUGH CITY

Many Injured at St. Joseph's Hospital—Large Buildings Are Unroofed and Many Small Buildings in the City Are Demolished by the Cyclone Which Struck City Late Wednesday—Many Tourists Are Caught in the Storm—Buildings at Stark County Fair Grounds Are Demolished

THIRD DEATH REPORTED Dickinson, N. D., June 19—East of Gola, in the Badlands, James Osterloth, 16, lost his life by drowning. He, and another, were herding sheep in a gully when a torrent of water came down before they could seek safety on high ground. Osterloth was washed away and his body cannot be found, but his companion climbed on a roof of the shed and saved himself.

Dickinson, N. D., June 19.—Two men were killed and several were injured in a tornado which struck Dickinson late yesterday afternoon. Many buildings were unroofed by the terrific wind.

The dead men are: Joseph Frieze and Joseph Frelich. Both were working in the Walton-Davis lumber yard. They were engaged in trying to fix a big door on a lumber shed when the wind caught the door and a pile of lumber, topping the pile over on them, and causing them to be crushed to death almost instantly. Both have families.

The family of William Tupkay, living on the west edge of Dickinson, escaped death when the wind caught the house and turned it upside down. All five members of the family were seriously injured.

There are 20 people, more or less seriously injured, in the Dickinson hospital.

Lightning struck the Dickinson State Normal School building, but not much damage was caused. Serious damage was caused to the electric light plant. The wind took off the roofs of many buildings, including the Company "K" Armory, the Elk's building, the South Side Grocery, the Dickinson wholesale grocery house, the Northern Pacific freight depot, the South Side drug store and numerous other buildings.

Scores of barns and small buildings were demolished by the cyclone. The sun parlor of St. Joseph's hospital was wrecked.

All buildings at the Stark county fair grounds were demolished. The loss here is very heavy, and the buildings were but two or three years old.

A number of tourists camped at the fair grounds felt the full force of the cyclone. Tourists tents were blown away and many of them lost camping equipment.

The storm extended all the way from Glendive, Montana, to Gladstone, North Dakota, but the wind appeared to reach its point of greatest fury around Dickinson. A funnel-shaped cloud was seen, and the swirling wind swept through the heart of the city. People were unable to stand against it. Great concern was caused, especially because of the presence of a great number of visitors attending the state Catholic convention in the city.

No one was injured at Gladstone, according to best information today, in spite of rumors to the effect that eight people were killed there. Eight miles south of Dunn Center the cyclonic wind struck again, many barns being blown down.

The basement superstructure of the Nazarene church, under construction in Dickinson, was completely demolished. The roof was torn off of the Dickinson Country Club house and the building otherwise wrecked. The gun club house was completely swept away.

Department stores and other buildings suffered considerable damage from the torrent of water which swept through the windows, damaging the stocks extensively. The new main normal building was also damaged.

The deluge to the north washed out roads and bridges, cutting off traffic between Dickinson and Killdeer. The water in Crooked creek at Manning swept six feet over the bridge on the main highway.

LOSS $500,000 Mandan, June 19—Information available at noon today that the tornado which struck Dickinson, causing two deaths and a property loss of $500,000 late yesterday extended over an area of 20 miles wide and approximately 40 miles long. Scores of fine barns, several farm homes and hundreds of smaller buildings were demolished.

No further fatalities are expected from the 20 who were more or less seriously injured in Dickinson. However, it is feared that belated reports from rural districts may result in the death toll being increased.

TWO KILLED IN DICKINSON TORNADO

FREIGHT TRAIN WRECK HOLDS UP TRAINS

HEAVY LOSS CAUSED HERE WHEN WIND, HAIL, RAIN STORM STRIKES CITY; WORST RAIN IN MANY YEARS

More Than Inch of Rain Falls Within 20 Minutes and Wind Reaches Velocity of 65 Miles an Hour Before Weather Bureau Instruments Are Destroyed—Hail Storm Apparently Covers Limited Area, Not Reaching North, Central Burleigh County, and But Short Distance East of Bismarck—Scores of Windows Are Broken in Bismarck.

The wind, hail and rain storm, which struck Bismarck yesterday afternoon, was described by weather bureau officials today as the worst hail storm in many years, and the cloudburst which struck the city shortly after 5 o'clock last evening probably the worst the city has experienced.

Within twenty minutes 1.16 inches of rain fell, weather bureau reports showed. Total rainfall in Bismarck was 1.79 inches, the bureau reports today show.

The area of the storm apparently was limited. It came from the southwest, and windows in the path of the driving hail from this direction were shattered.

Storm Goes Northeast
The hail storm extended north and east of Bismarck for 30 miles, according to Weather Observer Roberts. The last house reached by telephone by Mr. Roberts was that of Edward Lundquist, 30 miles north and east of Bismarck. He reported that there was a heavy hail storm there. Farmers could not determine the damage because the fields were covered with water, he said. He estimated the rainfall at two inches. The rainfall, according to Mr. Roberts, was heavier northeast of Bismarck than in the city.

The North Soo train spent the night at Baldwin, two miles of track being under water about Breen, a few miles north of here. Northern Pacific train No. 4, due here at 7:23 o'clock last night, was at Sweet Briar, west of Mandan, all night, as a result of a washout, but reached Mandan at 5 o'clock this morning, only to be held up by the Northern Pacific freight train wreck east of the city.

Instruments Useless
Lightning struck a tree in the yard of the United States Weather Bureau here, and virtually all the instruments of the bureau were destroyed. A telegram was dispatched to Washington by O. W. Roberts, observer, for new instruments.

The sunshine recorder at the weather bureau was burned out, the anemometer, which records the wind velocity, was destroyed, and the tipping bucket self-recording rain gauge was blown over. The bureau by other means, recorded 1.16 inches of rain in 20 minutes, and the anemometer showed a wind velocity of 65 miles an hour before it was destroyed. It may have risen to a higher velocity later.

Downtown streets were turned into raging torrents and at many places the water went over the curb, flooding basements and causing some damage to stocks of goods.

Windows Blown Out
Buildings in the western and southwestern parts of the city, which caught the full force of the hail storm, suffered much damage. Many plate glass windows were destroyed. Two hundred eight-two windows of a hotel of about 300 at the International Harvester Company's branch were shattered by hail. Many windows in the Bismarck Grocery Company, McKenzie hotel, Northern Pacific railroad station and scores of residences were broken out.

Both the green houses of Hoskins-Meyer and O. H. Will and Co. were almost destroyed by the hail. Damage at the Hoskins-Meyer greenhouse and nursery was estimated at about $4,000 by P. J. Meyer. Three-fourths of the panes of glass were blown out or broken by the hail, it being estimated that more than 12,000 panes were demolished. Plants were damaged.

Damage at the O. H. Will and Co. greenhouse was estimated at about $2,000. The nursery there also was flooded by choking of a storm sewer.

Loss on glass of both companies is insured.

The conservatory of C. B. Little was badly damaged.

Road Undermined
A concrete culvert on the concrete road to the bridge, was not large enough to hold the water that rushed through it, and the water began undermining the earth embankment. Planking was placed across to permit passage of vehicles, and watchmen stationed there by the police. The bottoms were flooded by the down-pour.

WATER RUSHES DOWN MANDAN'S SIXTH AVENUE

Sewers Choked and Water Is Diverted Into Main Street in That City

Mandan was visited by two distinct cloudbursts, but the city escaped the heavy hail damage visited on Bismarck. Few windows were broken and no serious hail damage was reported there.

The rain fell in torrents in two storms, one about 4 o'clock, Mandan time, and the other, part of the Dickinson storm, about 6 o'clock. Water poured from the hills and converted Sixth avenue into a mill race. Sixth avenue has 18-inch curbs, being paved to care for such emergencies, and the water filled the street, and overflowed on the sidewalk. Storm sewers six feet in diameter also are constructed to care for heavy flows of water. These sewers choked at the Northern Pacific tracks, diverting water on Main street and First streets.

The basements of the Nigey and Klondike hotels were flooded, the Lewis and Clark hotel basement had about 18 inches in it, it was reported, the postoffice basement was flooded, the barbershop of Frank Dow in the basement of the Farmers bank building was filled with water and many other basements flooded.

Because of two similar storms within ten years, Mandan merchants generally had protected their shops so that there was not great damage. The hail fell only for 10 or 15 minutes and was not severe. There was no hail in the second storm.

About 500 feet of track was washed out on the Northern Pacific at Sweet Briar, west of Mandan, Northern Pacific train No. 4 being held up there most of the night.

The stockyards at Sunny, west of Mandan, burned yesterday. The loss was estimated at about $10,000. The fire resulted when a building was struck by lightning. A grain and hay barn and part of the pens were saved. Lumber was being shipped in today by the Northern Pacific for the purpose of rebuilding the pens.

Rainfall was 2.03 inches.

Grain Grading Fund Case Is Filed In Court

Issuing an alternative writ of mandamus, Judge Jansoni of district court set June 26 as the day for hearing issues involved in a suit brought on the relation of J. N. Hagan, supervisor of grades, weights and measures, against John Steen, as state treasurer. The question to be determined in the suit is whether $15,000, left in the treasury as the unexpended balance of the grain grading fund when it was unexpended, should be credited to the grain grading department created by an initiated law.

Farmer Victim of Storm

ONE MAN HURT, OTHERS MAY BE DEAD IN WRECK

Extra Freight Train Goes in Ditch Three Miles East of Bismarck Early Today

CARS ARE PILED UP

Traffic of Through Trains Is Held Up as a Result of The Wreckage

Twenty freight cars were piled up at a point about 3 miles east of here at 3:50 o'clock this morning when a Northern Pacific freight train was wrecked.

The wreck was caused by undermining of the track by water rushing off the embankment. The engine passed over the bad place in the track, but the cars which followed it were piled up in all directions.

Ben Loomis of Nampa, Idaho, said to be stealing a ride on the train, suffered a broken leg. This was the only injury reported by trainmen.

The freight train, extra No. 1702, east bound, was traveling along at only a fair rate of speed. The wreck held up Northern Pacific passenger train No. 4, due here at 7:23 o'clock last night, which reached Mandan about 5 o'clock this morning after having been held up at Sweet Briar because of a washout.

A wrecking crew was summoned to begin clearing the tracks east of here, and effort was to be made to salvage grain and other merchandise.

May Be Two Dead
The possibility of two persons being dead in the wreck was advanced by a brakeman. He said that he saw a couple of youths get on the train to steal a ride, being on top of a coal car, and that, presumably, they were on the train when it was wrecked. The coal car toppled over and a good part of it is under water. Two bodies may be found when the car is lifted.

The wreck, which occurred on the flat east of the penitentiary, is surrounded by water, the flat being a small lake.

All trans-continental trains are held up until the wreck is cleared, and it is doubtful if there will be any trains in or out of Bismarck until tomorrow morning.

Lucky to Escape
The engine passed over a small culvert, on the ties, having gone off the rails. Only the guard rails kept it from plunging off the track and perhaps fatally injuring the engineer and fireman.

Loss Is $100,000
Two wrecking crews were engaged in cleaning up the wreck this afternoon. It was estimated by railroad men that the loss to the Northern Pacific was at least $100,000. It appeared doubtful if the wreck could be cleaned up within two days.

Mail was carried from the Bismarck postoffice to Menoken this afternoon, and put on No. 8, and mailed from here to Mandan to be put on train there.

MURDER'S LONG LIST

New York, June 19—American police records show at least 10,000 murder cases every year, according to a report of Dr. Frederick L. Hoffman, statistician.

YOUNG BISMARCKERS UP EARLY TO MAKE PROFITS FROM THE STORM

Young Bismarck is wide awake.

Early this morning the city was ringing. "Say, mister," piped up a small voice, "make the leaves off your lawn for 25 cents."

Several boys, it developed, were out bright and early seeking to earn small bits of money for helping to clean up the visible effects of the hail storm.

A trial was stopped in the courthouse by the storm. Hail smashed in windows and glass began flying across the room. The jurors were in no mood to listen to evidence. Judge Jansoni adjourned court.

The telephone girls also caught the brunt of the storm. After the lightning and rain had passed, the telephone girls were deluged with calls—one neighbor to another, a business man calling his home, or some other one concerned with the effect of the storm. The load of the company quadrupled. It was estimated that 4,000 telephone calls were handled between 6 and 8 p. m.

SHE'S PAID TO SEE COUNTRY

Miss Orpha J. Moss of Chicago spends most of each summer seeing the wonders of our national parks. And she gets paid for it. She's a traveling passenger agent and enjoys the distinction of being the only woman who can write T. P. A. after her name. Her main job is to plan trips for travelers, working out the schedule of transportation, sleeping car births, meals and all other costs.

Between the two storms, Mr. Engdahl took a walk and went into his garden to drain the water off his strawberry patch. Mr. Engdahl was last seen by Mr. Fred, going over a hill in the direction of the section road which runs through his farm. The Engdahl boys said that one of Mr. Engdahl's chores which he always performed himself, was to see that the culvert in this grade was kept free from debris.

Made For Culvert

He apparently made for this culvert, and after opening it, tried to recross the grade, when the second storm struck. He either became confused, or stepped off into deep water. The spade was found 20 feet from the culvert, lodged in a clump of willows, while the body was found about one-half mile south and east of the culvert, in a slough.

Struck or Stunned
As several severe crashes of thunder were heard in the vicinity during the time, it is thought, he may have been either struck or stunned by the lightning. The examination this afternoon will establish whether he was drowned or not. No inquest will be held, as the death was purely accidental.

Mr. Engdahl is survived by his wife, two sons, Victor and John, who both reside in Tryon township, and by one daughter, Julia, of Orlando, Cal.

ROADS WERE LIKE CREEKS

Local People Drive to Bismarck Through Storm

About 25 Bismarck and Burleigh county people who attended the New Salem Holstein circuit annual picnic and tour yesterday, can testify that it rained west of the river.

P. J. Meyer, A. F. Bradley and H. S. Dobler came through from New Salem after the rain. At places, Mr. Meyer said, he could determine he was on the road only by the fence posts, and the hill by the Mandan courthouse resembled a rushing mountain creek. The party passed 20 cars in the ditch between Mandan and New Salem.

There was no hail west of Mandan. The bad condition of the roads the two or three days previous had cut down the attendance at New Salem, but a successful Holstein circuit picnic was held nevertheless.

C. O. ENGDAHL, PIONEER, FOUND DEAD IN FIELD

May Have Been Struck By Lightning or Drowned in a Rushing Torrent

CORONER VISITS SCENE

Examination to be Made to Determine the Exact Cause of His Death

The death of C. O. Engdahl, whose body was found in his farm northeast of here, was caused by drowning, coroner Gobel announced, after physicians had conducted an examination this afternoon.

C. O. Engdahl, 65 years old, pioneer farmer of Tryon township, who has been a resident of this state for 42 years, was overcome by the storm yesterday, and his body found about a mile from home. He is believed to have been drowned, but until the examination to be performed this afternoon is completed, whether he was drowned or killed by lightning will not be definitely known.

Deputy Sheriff Kafer and County Coroner Gobel drove to the Engdahl farm this morning, and went over the ground with the sons and with Oscar Fred, who is renting the farm this year.

Between the two storms, Mr. Engdahl took a walk and went into his garden to drain the water off his strawberry patch. Mr. Engdahl was last seen by Mr. Fred, going over a hill in the direction of the section road which runs through his farm. The Engdahl boys said that one of Mr. Engdahl's chores which he always performed himself, was to see that the culvert in this grade was kept free from debris.

BARN IS BLOWN UPON STORE

Fargo, June 19—High winds caused heavy damage in the Klotten district in Nelson county, about 11 p. m. yesterday, according to word received here today. Many freak occurrences took place. A small barn in the vicinity of Klotten, owned by Mrs. Gertrude Nelson, was hurled on top of a confectionary store owned by her and this morning a pig that had been in the barn was found on top of the store, unhurt.

Several persons were cut by flying glass, none seriously.

Some 250 or 300 invitations have been sent farmers within a radius of 30 miles of Bismarck to come here that day for a good time. It is up to the people in town to come down that day and help show everyone a good time so they will know that Bismarck is all right. We want everyone in this part of the State to speak of Bismarck and to think of Bismarck as being "Our Town" and it will be a big help to carry out that spirit if everyone will join in on this celebration. It isn't going to be a big one but it will be a lot of fun.

LUMBER COMPANY EMPLOYEES ARE CRUSHED TO DEATH; 20 INJURED AS STORM SWEEPS THROUGH CITY

Many Injured at St. Joseph's Hospital—Large Buildings Are Unroofed and Many Small Buildings in the City Are Demolished by the Cyclone Which Struck

City Late Wednesday—Many Tourists Are Caught in the Storm—Buildings at Stark County Fair Grounds Are Demolished

THIRD DEATH REPORTED
Dickinson, N. D., June 19—East of Gola, in the Badlands, James Osterloth, 16, lost his life by drowning. He, and another, were herding sheep in a gully when a torrent of water came down before they could seek safety on high ground. Osterloth was washed away and his body cannot be found, but his companion climbed on a roof of the shed and saved himself.

Dickinson, N. D., June 19.—Two men were killed and several were injured in a tornado which struck Dickinson late yesterday afternoon. Many buildings were unroofed by the terrific wind.

The dead men are: Joseph Frieze and Joseph Frelich. Both were working in the Walton-Davis lumber yard. They were engaged in trying to fix a big door on a lumber shed when the wind caught the door and a pile of lumber, topping the pile over on them, and causing them to be crushed to death almost instantly. Both have families.

The family of William Tupkay, living on the west edge of Dickinson, escaped death when the wind caught the house and turned it upside down. All five members of the family were seriously injured.

There are 20 people, more or less seriously injured, in the Dickinson hospital.

Lightning struck the Dickinson State Normal School building, but not much damage was caused. Serious damage was caused to the electric light plant. The wind took off the roofs of many buildings, including the Company "K" Armory, the Elk's building, the South Side Grocery, the Dickinson wholesale grocery house, the Northern Pacific freight depot, the South Side drug store and numerous other buildings.

Scores of barns and small buildings were demolished by the cyclone. The sun parlor of St. Joseph's hospital was wrecked.

All buildings at the Stark county fair grounds were demolished. The loss here is very heavy, and the buildings were but two or three years old.

A number of tourists camped at the fair grounds felt the full force of the cyclone. Tourist tents were blown away and many of them lost camping equipment.

The storm extended all the way from Glendive, Montana, to Gladstone, North Dakota, but the wind appeared to reach its point of greatest fury around Dickinson. A funnel-shaped cloud was seen, and the swirling wind swept through the heart of the city. People were unable to stand against it. Great concern was caused, especially because of the presence of a great number of visitors attending the state Catholic convention in the city. No one was injured at Gladstone, according to best information to date, in spite of rumors to the effect that eight people were killed there.

Eight miles south of Dunn Center the cyclonic wind struck again, many barns being blown down.

Church Damaged
The basement superstructure of the Nazarene church, under construction in Dickinson, was completely demolished. The roof was torn off of the Dickinson Country Club house and the building otherwise wrecked. The gun club house was completely swept away.

Department stores and other buildings suffered considerable damage from the torrent of water which swept through the windows, damaging the stocks extensively.

The new main normal building was also damaged.

The deluge to the north washed out roads and bridges, cutting off traffic between Dickinson and Killdeer. The water in Crooked creek at Manning swept six feet over the bridge on the main highway.

LOSS $500,000
Mandan, June 19—Information available at noon today that the tornado which struck Dickinson, causing two deaths and a property toll of $500,000 late yesterday extended over an area of 20 miles wide and approximately 40 miles long. Scores of fine barns, several farm homes and hundreds of smaller buildings were demolished.

No further fatalities are expected from the 20 who were more or less seriously injured in Dickinson. However, it is feared that belated reports from rural districts may result in the death toll being increased.

REACH MINNESOTA
St. Paul, June 19—Sweeping down from the Dakotas, severe wind, rain and electrical storm struck this section of Minnesota early today. The downpour approached the proportions of a cloudburst.

REQUISITION IS PREPARED

Requisition for the return to Jamestown from Minneapolis of Frank Funk and Cora Funk, to face charges of manslaughter, has been prepared by attaches of Governor Nestos' office and forwarded to him for signature. The pair is under arrest in Minneapolis.

FIND TWO BIG LAKES
Ottawa, June 19—Two lakes comparable in size with Lake Ontario are in the southern part of Baffin Island and the island itself is nearly five times as large as Cuba, a topographical survey of Canada reveals. At many points of the island there are remains of Eskimo encampments and villages.

M'KENZIE TAX CASE EVIDENCE IS PRESENTED

State Opens its Presentation Before County Judge in Bismarck Today

WAS REGISTERED HERE

Also Testified in Court That Residence Was Here, Says Witness

Witnesses were called on the stand for the state, in its effort to collect an inheritance tax from the estate of the late Alexander McKenzie, former Northwest political leader, to testify that he had voted in Bismarck in the re-election of the hearing before County Judge J. C. Davies today.

W. A. Falconer, city assessor, testified that McKenzie personally registered for the 1920 primary election as a resident of Bismarck, although he was spending most of his time in St. Paul. M. J. O'Connor testified that at several elections some years previous Mr. McKenzie voted in Bismarck and said this city was his legal residence, although he was not here much of the time.

The state also introduced a deposition of Charles E. McNamara, court reporter, to the effect that on June 14, 1922, eight days before his death, Mr. McKenzie, testifying in the case of Green vs. Tuttle in federal court, St. Paul, before Judge Booth, said his residence was in Bismarck, and had been since 1873.

The state's witnesses followed the resting of the case in behalf of the estate. T. H. Poole of this city being the last witness called by Alfred Zuger and H. C. Flannery, attorneys for George P. Flannery, administrator, who maintains Mr. McKenzie's residence was in St. Paul.

Mr. Poole testified that he had assisted Mr. McKenzie in making out his federal income tax return, it being paid to the St. Paul office, and that on October 6, 1921, at a meeting of the Bismarck Water Supply Company in St. Paul, Mr. McKenzie said he had disposed of his interests, and would not return to Bismarck.

Wilson Followers Want Definite League Plank

By Harry R. Hunt
NEA Service Writer

Washington, June 13.—The shade of Woodrow Wilson will be invoked at the New York Democratic convention by a fighting group of his loyal followers in an effort to carry forward the cause closest to Wilson's heart, by incorporating in the party platform a clear-cut and definite plank endorsing American participation in the League of Nations.

Four of Wilson's old cabinet members, all of them but one possible presidential selections, will join in the fight to commit the party on the League issue. They are:

Newton D. Baker, former secretary of war.

Carter Glass, who served as head of the treasury after McAdoo's resignation.

David F. Houston, secretary of agriculture and later of treasury under Wilson.

Josephus Daniels, secretary of navy through the entire eight years of Wilson's regime.

Aiding these ex-cabinet officials in one drive to resurrect the cause of their dead chief, not only because they believe in the cause but also because they believe it can be used better than any other issue to differentiate Democrats from Republicans and stir the nation's dormant idealism, will be Bernard M. Baruch, Robert W. Woolley, Norman Davis, Henry Morgenthau and Vance McCormick.

There is the making of real drama in the scene as it will be set for the League of Nations fight.

Wilson's last message to the country, his brief Armistice Day speech last November 11, will be made the keynote for the occasion.

Feeling broken, Wilson leaned heavily on his cane as he addressed the crowd that made pilgrimage to his home on that anniversary of the end of the war. But as he spoke, something of his old fighting spirit came back to him and as he closed, his voice rose in a challenge to those foes, "those fools," who interpreted their "puny wills," against a cause which he said, "as certainly as there is a God in heaven will prevail."

With this last message from their old commander as the leit motiv, champions of the League in the convention believe the crusading spirit of the delegates may be roused to a higher pitch than in any other issue.

These leaders of the League cause deny that it can be used in any way to the party's disadvantage in the campaign.

"The Republicans will charge us with favoring the League, whether we say so or not," they explain. "They will seek to use it against us anyway. All we propose is to make the League battle an offensive, not a defensive one; to stand definitely and boldly for American participation in the only world organization which promises any practicable assistance in maintaining the peace of the world."

EXPLOSION VICTIMS BEING TAKEN ON HOSPITAL SHIP

Carrying the dead and injured from the U. S. S. dreadnaught Mississippi to the hospital ship Relief following an explosion during range practice off San Pedro Harbor, Calif. Forty-eight officers and sailors were trapped in a gun turret by the blast when a heavy charge of high explosive flared back from the gun breech, filling the turret with deadly gas.

IS VICTIM

But two days away from transfer to another battleship and a tour of duty in China, fate decreed that Norman Lee Barber, 21-year-old boy of San Francisco, should meet death in the gun turret explosion aboard the dreadnaught Mississippi. In his last letter, to his mother dated June 1, he said, "I told you some time back I would be in France in June, but I don't think now I will make it. My orders are to transfer me to the Asiatic station by the first available transport, and the Argonne leaves here June 14. We are being a special experimental battle practice June 11, so I can't get leave, although I have tried hard."

The dealer who sold these last season models is properly the one to whom the owner looks for all the necessities of his performance. The truly modern dealer just as conscientious as he is to it that the cars he has sold in other years give satisfaction to their owners as he does in the case of the new models he has for sale."

WOMAN LEADS HERMIT LIFE

Woman Botanist Leads Hermit Life in Mountain Wilderness

By A. H. Frederick
NEA Service Writer

Ketchikan, Ore., June 13.—A woman who has found her vocation in places otherwise unpenetrated save for hardiest of occasional hunters, trappers and prospectors, has her headquarters here.

She is Mrs. J. M. Finch, 57, a forest worker who makes her living from gathering rare plants and bulbs. Her workshop is in remote ranges of the Siskiyou mountains of northern California and Southern Oregon. Her equipment is rifle, pack horse, hunting dogs, tent, bedding, pick, shovel and ax, provisions and a knowledge of botany.

"The mountains, I love them," declares Mrs. Finch. "I have spent all my life in them. For more than 25 years I have worked in the Siskiyou and I have shipped my plants and bulbs to most parts of the United States and Europe."

Mrs. Finch generally makes her trips alone—journeys of a week to 10 days—and meets dangers of snow and blizzard without fear. Nor does she fear wild animals, trusting to her rifle accuracy for protection.

Mrs. Finch became interested in the work when she heard stories of the rare specimens which were hid away in the valleys and unknown places of the Siskiyou. She made her first trip, and satisfactory were the results that she had continued.

Plants and bulbs which she collects are eagerly desired in all parts of the world, rare Lewisias, Mariposa tulips, rock plants and many others.

Mrs. Finch is in the best of health, which she attributes to her active outdoor life.

"I expect to be doing the same work when I am sixty," she declares. "Personally, I think it's a great life for a woman."

PERSONALITY TO FIT CLOTHES

Would Analyze Women's Personalities to Make Them Fit Clothes

By M. Therese Bonney
NEA Service Writer

Paris, June 13.—In these days when human beings have strange complexes and even dogs are susceptible to the colors they wear it seems rather natural to think of having your "psyche" wardrobe "psyched" and thus learn what you should wear.

The color you wear is a very vital one. Mme. Valentine de Tulkine, former Russian noblewoman, thinks nothing of more real importance than that a woman be happy in the clothes she wears and how, she asks, is this ever possible when the very clothes she wears have been designed and created for a personality diametrically opposed to hers?

How fatal it is when a woman wears checks when she should wear pinks, stripes instead of tucks, Mme. de Tulkine believes in analyzing a woman's personality and diagnosing her already developed taste just as a doctor might proceed for a disease. The results are astounding—a complete transformation. Clothes should be designed and models created, not for aim, trim chosen mannequins but for the individual who is to wear them.

Mme. de Tulkine comes to tea, studies your personality, notes the way you sit you walk and use your hands and then gives you a prescription telling you the kind of clothes, materials, colors, combination of lines you should wear, designs them for you and supervises their execution. She will not take tea with you at the Ritz because she wants to see you as you really are, for it is, first and above all, your natural self your clothes should express. "Woe unto the woman," says Mme. de Tulkine, "who wears clothes 'slightly because they are the latest style.'"

CAR STALLS, DRIVER ESCAPES

Hebron, N. D., June 13.—Karl Kreis, farmer living ten miles south of here is minus one perfectly good car, the pilot bars of the engine hauling N. P. Train No. 1 Monday morning are dented and bent—but Kreis is alive and unharmed to tell the story.

In Hebron to attend the Congregational church conference he started for his home and his car stalled directly on the railway tracks. The train came in sight and Kreis vainly tried to start the machine. There was no time to push it off the tracks. Kreis jumped for his life and stood idly by and powerless as the train approached and smashed his car into ten thousand bits.

Indian Lad Today High in Command Of Ship of State

SENATOR CURTIS SMILES

By NEA Service June 19.—On the back of an unsaddled pony, galloping across the moonlit plains of an Indian reservation into the world of white men, rode the little grandson of Old Chief White Plume. That was 50 years ago. Today the keen-eyed youth who forsook the sleepy shadows of an Indian camp for the white lights of civilization is high in command of the ship of state.

Then, on the advice of his grandmother, he slipped away to join the white men. He was a jockey in Topeka for five years. In the winter he sold newspapers and peanuts in a railroad station. When he quit racing he drove a hack to get money to buy law books. These books he read as he was seated high upon his hack, in the light of the oil-lamps on each side. At 21 he passed a law examination. At 24 he was elected prosecuting attorney. In 1893 he went to Congress. In 1907 he was elected to the Senate. He has served in Congress continuously for 30 years. Now he is one of the most powerful men in the national government.

GILBERT HAUGAN RETURNS FROM CONVENTION

Following the business session, the delegates were taken on a ride to Mayville and Hatton. Saturday evening a banquet, with several prominent members of the lodge as speakers, was held. On Sunday, the convention celebrated the tenth anniversary of the organizing of the Fourth District Lodge. Among the speakers at this affair were Iver Aker, formerly of Bismarck, T. H. Gilbert, president of the supreme lodge, and John Holland of Fargo.

Mr. Haugen was elected to act as one of the fourteen delegates who will represent the fourth district lodge at the biennial convention of the Supreme Lodge of the Sons of Norway, to be held at Racine, Wis., July 21, 22 and 23. Resolutions were adopted at the business sessions expressing regret at the death of Siver Serungard, of Devils Lake, former president of the order, and of Senator P. O. Thorson, of Grand Forks.

Finlayson Case Dismissed, Protest Is Made

E. S. Allen, states attorney, today dismissed the case against Ellsworth Finlayson, charged with manufacturing intoxicating liquor, stating in "reasons for dismissal" filed in court that he learned that Finlayson was engaged at the time of his arrest as a detective for the state licensing department. Finlayson had been arrested with Jack Peyfergonen. The states attorney says that he has been informed that O. W. Wildmer, an inspector of the licensing department, "employed the defendant at the time to catch Jack Peyfergonen. While there is evidence to show the guilt of this defendant, I am of the opinion, and so determine, that an information should not be filed, because of said employment," the states attorney continued.

The states attorney said he protested "against the employment of men to commit crimes, or induce others to commit them. I have evidence to show that this defendant, Ellsworth Finlayson, furnished the still with which this liquor was manufactured, and Jack Peyfergonen, who has pleaded guilty to this crime, testified that Finlayson agreed to teach him how to make it."

The states attorney said that if the attorney-general's office continue the practice he hoped it "will keep the state's attorney informed as to who his investigators are" so that the county will not be put to the expense of bringing actions, in good faith, against law breakers, to ascertain at the last moment that the law breakers are in the employ of the state of North Dakota.

A century or so ago almost everyone had good teeth and there was very little dental work to be done. Why? Simply because the food people ate was not processed; it contained a plentiful supply of calcium (lime) that vitally important element which is necessary for the formation of sound, hard teeth.

WHEAT DOWN
EARLY TODAY

Setback Ensues Despite Kansas Reports

Chicago, June 19.—Although reports of hot winds in Kansas, said to be the worst in years, led to a material upturn in wheat prices today, during the early dealings, heavy profit-taking sales soon brought about a sharp setback. On the downturn, houses with eastern connections became aggressive sellers. Besides, the technical position of the market was weakened by the recent bulge of 13 to 14c from the low point a week ago Monday. Today's opening price which ranged from 3c to 1 1/2c higher with July $1.17 1/2 to 3c and September $1.18 1/2 to 3c, followed by declines of as much as 3c from the early top figures.

Wheat fell a little further and then made considerable recovery. Late reports were to the effect that the hot wave in the southwest was breaking. The close was unsettled, one and one-eighth to 1 1/2 cents net lower, July $1.14 3/4 to 7-8 and September $1.15 7-8 to $1.16.

New York, June 19. (By the A. Anti-McAdoo leaders began conferences seeking to secure possible opponents. Senator Harrison of Mississippi, already selected for temporary chairman of the convention, is the latest to be mentioned as a possible compromise candidate for the nomination.
Others, some of whom have already opened headquarters, include Oscar Underwood, John W. Davis, Carter Glass, Samuel L. Ralston, James Cox and Joseph T. Robinson.

SAY M'KENZIE
SOUGHT TO GET
ABSENT BALLOT

Wanted to Vote For Senator
McCumber in 1922. Witnesses Tell Court

TESTIMONY IS ENDED

In the matter of the estate of Alexander McKenzie, deceased, which has been before the County Court for some time, evidence on both sides was completed and the case closed and stipulation entered into that, on ten days' notice by either side the matter will come up before the court for final argument and decision. Late yesterday, Burleigh County and the state tax department put in evidence yesterday testimony rebutting and contradicting the testimony of George P. Flannery, executor of the will of Mr. McKenzie. At the former hearing Mr. Flannery testified that two or three days before Mr. McKenzie's death he was consulted regarding the absent ballot that had been sent Mr. McKenzie by Edward G. Patterson, and Mr. McKenzie desired at that time, according to the testimony of Mr. Flannery, to know what effect his voting the absent ballot would have on his residence, and Mr. Flannery informed him that it would make him a resident of Bismarck, and that Mr. McKenzie had then told him that as much as he wanted to vote for Mr. McCumber for Senator he could not do so. The attorney for Burleigh County and the State Tax Commissioner served notice on the attorneys for Mr. Flannery to produce the original letter of Mr. Patterson inclosing the said absent ballot to Mr. McKenzie but they stated same could not be found. Mr. Patterson was then sworn as a witness for the county of Burleigh and the State Tax Commissioner testified that he had received a letter from Mr. McKenzie from St. Paul on the morning of the 21st of June, 1922, asking that an absent ballot be sent to him to St. Paul, and that on the afternoon of June 21, 1922, Eugene Walla, on the written order of Mr. Patterson for Mr. McKenzie, got an absent ballot from the County Auditor and Mr. Patterson mailed same to Mr. McKenzie that evening. The County Auditor, Frank J. Johnson, also testified that he remembered that the absent ballot was obtained at that time, and fixed the date by the fact that Mr. McKenzie died the next day. The contention of the County of Burleigh and the State Tax Commissioner is that the ballot never reached St. Paul before June 22, 1922, the day on which Mr. McKenzie died, and according to the evidence could not have been in his possession at all because he was unconscious, according to the evidence, during all that day until his death, and therefore could never have shown the absent ballot to Mr. Flannery. The County Auditor, also testified that it is a rule to keep a list of the absent ballots issued so that only one would be issued to a voter, and that only one absent ballot was issued to Alexander McKenzie previous to the primary election in June, 1922. Mr. Patterson produced the carbon copy of his letter to Mr. McKenzie in which he inclosed the absent ballot to Mr. McKenzie and that was dated June 21, 1922.

MARKET NEWS

WHEAT DOWN
EARLY TODAY

Setback Ensues Despite Kansas Reports

Chicago, June 19.—Although reports of hot winds in Kansas, said to be the worst this year, led to a material upturn in wheat prices today, during the early dealings, heavy profit-taking sales soon brought about a sharp setback. On the downturn, houses with eastern connections became aggressive sellers. Besides, the technical position of the market was weakened by the recent bulge of 13 to 14¢ from the low point a week ago Monday. Today's opening price which ranged from 9¢ to 13¢ higher with July $1.17 1/2 to 3¢ and September $1.18 1/2 to 3¢ were followed by declines of as much as 3¢ from the early top figures.

SAY M'KENZIE
SOUGHT TO GET
ABSENT BALLOT

Wanted to Vote For Senator
McCumber in 1922, Witnesses Tell Court

TESTIMONY IS ENDED

In the matter of the estate of Alexander McKenzie, deceased, which has been before the County Court for some time, evidence on both sides was completed and the case closed and stipulation entered into that, on ten days notice by either side the matter will come up before the court for final argument and decision. Late yesterday, Burleigh County and the state tax department put in evidence yesterday testimony rebutting and contradicting the testimony of George P. Flannery, executor of the will of Mr. McKenzie. At the former hearing Mr. Flannery testified that two or three days before Mr. McKenzie's death he was consulted regarding an absent ballot that had been sent Mr. McKenzie by Edward G. Patterson, and Mr. McKenzie desired at that time, according to the testimony of Mr. Flannery, to know what effect his voting the absent ballot would have on his residence, and Mr. Flannery informed him that it would make him a resident of Bismarck, and that Mr. McKenzie had then told him that as much as he wanted to vote for Mr. McCumber for Senator he could not do so. The attorney for Burleigh County and the State Tax Commissioner served notice on the attorneys for Mr. Flannery to produce the original letter of Mr. Patterson inclosing the said absent ballot to Mr. McKenzie but they stated same could not be found. Mr. Patterson was then sworn as a witness for the county of Burleigh and the State Tax Commissioner and testified that he had received a letter from Mr. McKenzie from St. Paul on the morning of the 21st of June, 1922, asking that an absent ballot be sent to him to St. Paul, and that on the afternoon of June 21, 1922, Eugene Walla, on the written order of Mr. Patterson for Mr. McKenzie, got an absent ballot from the County Auditor and Mr. Patterson mailed same to Mr. McKenzie that evening. The County Auditor, Frank J. Johnson, also testified that he remembered that the absent ballot was obtained at that time, and fixed the date by the fact that Mr. McKenzie died the next day. The contention of the County of Burleigh and the State Tax Commissioner is that the ballot never reached St. Paul before June 22, 1922, the day on which Mr. McKenzie died, and according to the evidence could not have been in his possession at all because he was unconscious, according to the evidence, during all that day until his death, and therefore could never have shown the absent ballot to Mr. Flannery. The County Auditor, also testified that it is a rule to keep a list of the absent ballots issued so that only one would be issued to a voter, and that only one absent ballot was issued to Alexander McKenzie previous to the primary election in June, 1922. Mr. Patterson produced the carbon copy of his letter to Mr. McKenzie in which he inclosed the absent ballot to Mr. McKenzie and that was dated June 21, 1922.

Indian Lad Today High in Command Of Ship of State

SENATOR CURTIS SMILES

By NEA Service
Topeka, Kas., June 19.—On the back of an unaddled pony, galloping across the moonlit plains of an Indian reservation into the world of white men, rode the little grandson of Old Chief White Plume. That was 50 years ago. Today the keen-eyed youth who forsook the sleepy shadows of an Indian camp for the white lights of civilization is high in command of the ship of state. He is United States Senator Charles Curtis of Kansas, administration leader in the upper house of Congress. Curtis is a Kaw Indian—the son of a soldier-frontiersman and a part Indian mother. He spent the first 10 years of his life on a reservation as a ward of the nation. Then, on the advice of his grandmother, he slipped away to join the white men. He was a jockey in Topeka for five years. In the winter he sold newspapers and peanuts in a railroad station. When he quit racing he drove a hack to get money to buy law books. These books he read as he was seated high upon his hack, in the light of the oil-lamps on each side. At 21 he passed a law examination. At 24 he was elected prosecuting attorney. In 1893 he went to Congress. In 1907 he was elected to the Senate. He has served in Congress continuously for 30 years. Now he is one of the most powerful men in the national government.

Finlayson Case Dismissed, Protest Is Made

E. S. Allen, state's attorney, today dismissed the case against Ellsworth Finlayson, charged with manufacturing intoxicating liquor, stating in "reasons for dismissal" filed in court that he learned that Finlayson was engaged at the time of his arrest for the state licensing department. Finlayson had been arrested with Jack Pfeiffer. The state's attorney says that he has been informed that O. W. Widmer, an inspector of the licensing department, "employed the defendant at the time to catch Jack Pfeiffer. While there is evidence to show the guilt of this defendant, I am of the opinion, and so determine, that an information should not be filed, because of aid employment," the state's attorney continued. The state's attorney said he protested "against the employment of a man to commit crime, or induce others to commit crime. I have evidence to show that this defendant, Ellsworth Finlayson, furnished the still with which this liquor was manufactured, and Jack Pfeiffer, who has pleaded guilty to this crime, testified that Finlayson agreed to teach him how to make it." The state's attorney said that if the attorney-general's office continue the practice he hoped it "will keep the state's attorney informed as to who his investigators are" so that the county will not be put to the expense of bringing actions, in good faith, against law breakers, to ascertain at the last moment that the law breakers are in the employ of the state of North Dakota.

WHY
OUR FOREFATHERS
HAD GOOD TEETH

A century or so ago almost everyone had good teeth and there was very little toothache to be done. Why? Simply because the food people ate was not processed; it contained a plentiful supply of calcium (lime) that vitally important element which is necessary for the formation of sound, hard teeth.

Breakfast

is a delicious whole wheat food which contains an abundant supply of calcium (lime) it also contains the other fifteen necessary food elements, and the three vitamins. Eat it regularly for sound teeth and good health.

THE STATE'S OLDEST NEWSPAPER
(Established 1873)

UNWELCOME ASSOCIATION

It would have been far better for the forces gathered in the St. Paul convention to form a third party to have flatly deserted the meeting when it was captured by Communists in the opening session, than to have remained in it, as they did. For if the opponents of the Communists can control the convention, there can be no solidarity in the party, and if the Communists control there can be no hope of success. It would have been the part of good citizens, too, for those in the convention, failing to win their opening battle with Communists, to refuse to have anything to do with such forces, openly bent on the destruction of the government.

The third party convention may call forcibly to the attention of the people of the country the fact that the Communist organization is no fanciful creation of the imagination of an over-zealous official, and to demonstrate that the Russian Internationale is actively engaged in promoting its own kind of revolution in this nation. The statement of Secretary of State Hughes regarding the activity of the Soviet in the United States, assailed vigorously at the time and ridiculed by many, may be recalled with much emphasis by many citizens.

The menace of a sporadic new party is made more emphatic by the proceedings in St. Paul. Should it achieve success it can only do so with the aid of forces of destruction, it can only lead the nation toward the disastrous continental bloc system and minority rule, and it can only serve to break down the steady influence of a great party organization, such as the country now has in its major political parties.

HONKERS

Motor vehicle owners in the United States paid over 471 million dollars in taxes last year.

There are only 430,000 miles of surfaced highways in the whole country. So auto and motorcycle owners in one year pay more than $1000 taxes for every mile of good roads.

The hole made in the American pocketbook by autos reminds us of one of the craters on the moon. But the auto is easily three-fourths a necessity, only one-fourth a pleasure device.

It is cheap at any price, considering the time it saves. Time, after all, is the thing of greatest value among our many forms of wealth.

NOT THE RIGHT SPIRIT

With an election approaching on June 25 complaints are voiced in many quarters against the apparent lethargy of the voters who must decide the issues. This is not a healthy condition. Better that some bitterness creep into the campaign than that there be no interest in it. It is the duty of every citizen to inform himself of the issues before him, of the record and the calibre of the candidates, and then it is his duty to cast his ballot on June 25. Lack of interest on the part of the voters at large is one of the most dangerous conditions in any democratic government.

SCENT

Everything is going wrong. The latest is that flowers are losing their scent. Scientific cross-breeding by florists, to increase the size and color of blossoms, is at the expense of the perfume. The plant energy that naturally would go to make fragrance is used up by artificially stimulated growth.

Nature always exacts her penalty—her price. The loss of floral fragrance alarms botanists. There are 4300 species of cultivated flowers, but only 420 have an agreeable odor. Of the 308 varieties of violets, only 13 emit perfume.

COBWEBS

Some forms of wealth are beyond price. In the liquor collection that was left by the late J. P. Morgan, are bottles of Napoleon's brandy and a cognac made in 1795. Even a prohibitionist might be tempted to sneak a drink from such a treasure.

In our large cities are plenty of gunmen who would commit murder for one bottle of the 1795 cognac.

STEEL

We still live in the Age of Steel. And this country of ours last year made over three-fifths of the world's pig iron, from which steel is manufactured.

In one recent month Americans made almost as much pig iron as in the entire year 1881.

Pride in country begins with knowledge of its strength and power. In iron and steel, at least, we're more important than all the rest of the world combined.

FUTURE

A bottle holds just so many drinks. The ground contains just so much iron, copper, coal, oil, gas and soil fertility.

We're using up these natural resources fast. They exist in such gigantic quantities that it'll be a thousand years or more before they're exhausted. But humanity has many thousands of years to live. Problem of making a living will become increasingly difficult.

INVESTMENTS

The French people have 5000 million dollars invested in foreign countries, not counting Russian loans which have vanished in smoke. Their income from these sources is 250 millions a year. That's a return of five per cent, which should entice suckers who think they can get something for nothing. A Frenchman's wisdom in investments amounts to genius.

The children in grammar school don't know much more than their parents did when in high school.

RECALLING LEWIS AND CLARK

In placing markers on the trail followed by Lewis and Clark around the rapids of the Missouri River in the neighborhood of Great Falls, Mont., the people of that region are paying tribute to one of the greatest adventures in American history. What Great Falls has done should be done all along the line of the explorers' march, so that those who come after may be reminded of the men who blazed the first trail. Fortunately, a full and detailed account of their route is to be found in almost any good library. For the journals of Lewis and Clark are beginning to receive the attention which they deserve. Not that the volumes possess unusual literary merit. Clark appears to have been a matter-of-fact writer, recording little more than bare observations, whereas Lewis was an elaborate describer of scenery and adventures, more interesting for their information than for the manner of telling. Yet the record which these two men left makes most of the "Wild West" seem "stale, flat and unprofitable." The volumes may be opened almost anywhere at random and are certain to yield material of interest.

Lewis's entry for June 14, 1805, for example, tells how he set forth on foot to examine the rapids of the Missouri, and was enchanted to come upon a great falls, and above it a long cataract. From a neighboring hill he was able to look out over a vast plain stretching to the foothills. On it roamed great herds of buffaloes. Near by the Missouri spread out into "a smooth, even and unruined sheet of water of nearly a mile in width bearing on its watery bosom vast flocks of geese which fed at pleasure in the delightful pasture on either border." Near by he shot a buffalo, and had hardly discharged his gun when a "large white or rather brown" bear crept up on him and started to charge him. He had not time to load, and the nearest tree was 300 yards away. He started to run, was followed by the bear, and so decided to take to the water, where he and the bear stopped to look at each other, whereupon the latter turned tail and fled.

In the afternoon, while returning to camp, he snied an animal that at first he took for a wolf; but as he approached, it crouched like a cat about to spring. When he shot it disappeared into a burrow. After examining the tracks he decided it was "of the tiger kind." Some moments later he was charged by three bull buffaloes, which, however, like the bear, turned and ran when they got near him. This concluded his encounters with animals for the day—apparently more exciting than usual, for he remarked that they "wore the impression on my mind of incantment."

Although it is clear that Captain Lewis had good imaginative and descriptive powers, and that his day's record was full of adventures, it is also plain that he was not a naturalist even by accident. To him animals represented adventures rather than specimens, otherwise he would not have been content to describe a bear as "white or brown" when it was either a grizzly or one of the smaller brown bears, nor would he have pictured an animal as like a wolf or one of the cats so loosely that his modern editor surmises it may have been a cougar. A bear familiarly known as a mountain lion—which is practically never seen in the plains, and is rarely found by a burrow.

Why quarrel with him on this score? His story is fascinating and told with that vividness which inheres in all true records of adventure. To be sure, his spelling is more convenient than correct, and his use of capitals distinctly individual. "I felt myself much fatigued," he wrote at the end of his day's narrative on that June 14, 119 years ago, "but eat a hearty supper and took a good night's rest, the weather being warm I had left my leather over shirt and had worn only a yellow flannel one." It is only necessary to know how many helpings of buffalo steak he had at supper to live with him through his entire day.—New York Times.

ADVENTURE OF THE TWINS

BY OLIVE ROBERTS BARTON

"The man in the moon is so short and so fat, he can't bend over this way or bend over that."

He has not seen his feet since the Fourth of July.

But he says that's his shape, so there's no use to try."

That's what Johnny Jump Up was singing in the moonlight.

The Twins woke up and rubbed their eyes.

"Is that you, Johnny?" called Nick.

"Yes, sir, it's me," said Johnny, doing a handspinning on the window-sill.

"Are we going on an adventure?" asked Nancy eagerly. "Are you going to take us on a journey?"

"Yes, I am," said the funny little fairy. "That is, if you want to go, and if the time is willing."

The Twins scrambled out of bed and slipped into their clothes and put on the magic shoes.

As usual, they became so little that their chins nearly touched the ground.

"Come on," said Johnny Jump Up, gaily. "We have a long way to go and the night is waning. Come."

So they all climbed down the rose vine to the magic garden. Johnny Jump Up led the way.

And soon they came to the pansy bed.

"Hello," called a sweet voice, and

FABLES ON HEALTH

WHY WE USE FANS

Out came the ancient palm fans as soon as the hot days came, and all the members of the Jones family soon were frantically waving.

Had anyone asked why, the answer very probably would have been: "To keep cool, of course!"

Which seems like a very reasonable answer.

But the real hygienic value of the hand fan is that it keeps air from stagnating; it provides an artificial means for keeping the air in motion. Where there is no natural movement in the air it should be kept in motion by artificial means. Hence, the electric fan and even the hand fan has a distinct hygienic value.

Air should never be allowed to become stagnant, and stagnant air is particularly noticeable in the hot weather.

Get rid of it.

Driving a wife or a horse too much may make them throw a shoe.

One thing a lot of people have an easy time getting ahead on is loafing.

Trouble is brewing in some countries while brewing is trouble in America.

Hot air and cold feet are usually pals.

Every man is boss in his own home—when the family is away.

Money may not go any farther, but you can, if you get any.

It's a good idea to see things as you travel along, for life is a one-way street.

Nicest thing about being a man is you don't have to stay home after washing your head.

After having it six months, many autoists almost know the number of their license plate now.

It's the radio's fault when a man stays at home, and says he has been to church.

The rich girl can well pick daisy petals and say, "he loves me; he loves my money."

It must be awful to be a neighbor's child because they never will amount to anything.

The only safe side to any argument is the middle.

Nothing can take a man off his feet like seeing a comfortable chair.

One of the great reasons for wanting to go somewhere is not being invited.

Following in someone else's footsteps will never get you ahead of anyone.

Bathers are in favor of permanent waves at all beaches.

A success is a self-starter and a failure a self-stopper.

It's the radio's fault when a man stays at home, and says he has been to church.

The rich girl can well pick daisy petals and say, "he loves me; he loves my money."

It must be awful to be a neighbor's child because they never will amount to anything.

TEN MILLION FORDS PARADE

They're off! Ten Million Ford Cars in one parade.

With Ford No. 10,000,000 scheduled to cross the United States on the Lincoln Highway, a genius for figures has worked out the matter of staging a parade of the entire 10,000,000 Model T Fords.

Here's the way he figures it.

The road selected is 24,840 miles long circling the earth at the equator. He parks the Fords in one place at the side of the road, sets a pace of twenty miles an hour for the parade and starts the cars at intervals of thirty seconds.

Drivers are to have an eight-hour day the same as that enjoyed by all Ford employees, and are, of course, to have Sundays, Christmas, New Year's and Fourth of July off.

If you were inclined to watch such a parade and would remain until the last car passed, you'd have to stock at your place along the line for thirty-two and a half years.

With all the Fords remaining in line, it wouldn't be long before you would find yourself in the center of a whirling corkscrew of cars, and as the genius has already figured it, if you remained to the finish, and were observant, you probably would have noticed that the first car passed you sixty-seven times before the last or ten-millionth car had left the parking ground.

Furthermore, figuring Ford production on the time basis of the last million, 65 million more Ford cars would have been built while you were watching the parade.

GOOD THINGS TO EAT

By Albert Apple

If you like delicious things to eat, you certainly picked out the wrong generation in which to live. The cookery of centuries ago must have been exquisite, judging from the writings of some of the ecstatic eaters.

The king of Bithynia, Asia Minor, on one of his military expeditions, developed a violent craving for an ocean herring. The ocean was far away. So the king's cook took a big turnip, cut it into the shape of a herring, fried it in oil, seasoned it with the powdered grains of a dozen black poppies.

The king swore it was the finest fish he ever ate. While you've eaten many a fish that tasted as good, it illustrates the phenomenal skill of ancient cooks.

Cooking is sometimes classed as one of the lost arts.

The most famous course at banquets of rich Romans of old was humming-bird tongues, brought long distances by relays of swift runners. Today they'd use refrigerator cars or airplanes.

Greek chefs of several thousand years ago were able to serve a whole pig, roasted on one side and boiled on the other, so skillfully prepared that the two parts were as distinct as if cooked separately. Tasty? Well, the stuffing was saturated with a dozen or more kinds of wine.

A race of gluttons was the natural development from this marvelous ancient cooking. A past-master of them, named Apicius, specialized at large shrimps. Hearing that the shrimps along the Atlantic coast were much larger, he actually bought a ship, made the trip, was disappointed, and returned in deep melancholy.

Philozenus, asked what he wished most, promptly answered: "A crane's neck, so I would be longer in partaking of my meals."

Those good old days are gone. The last stronghold of eating as a ceremony was the banquet, now being made extinct by prohibition.

Even the traditional Sunday dinner is losing out, in the number of courses if not in taste.

People are beginning to eat scientifically, by calories—and getting the job finished as quickly as possible, gulping.

It's just as well that cookery is becoming a lost art, though, for fine cooks ruin more digestions than good cooks, by enticing to over-eating.

Jack, ear old Jack, met me at the station, little Marquise, and my first thought, as I caught a view of him towering a little above the crowd looking for me, was how much better looking he was than Karl Whitney.

I did not have time to think anything else before I was gathered up in his arms in a great bear like hug—taken completely off my feet.

"Oh, Leslie, I've been so lonely! You'll never go away again," were his first words.

Dear little Marquise, did you know I've been so lonely, anything sweeter than that after you had been apart a short while? I am sure he did not.

For answer, I put my arms around his neck and kissed him again. I did not care if the whole world saw us. Jack is mine, my husband, and you have been so much better looking than that fellow who had been apart a short while? I am sure he did not.

Women Want Instruction Says Mrs. Parkes

Mrs. J. R. Parkes, regional secretary of the fifth district of the League of Women Voters, returned to Bismarck last night to be present at the permanent organization of the League here.

A mass meeting of all women interested regardless of political affiliations has been called for Friday at 8 p. m., at the Grand Pacific hotel. Mrs. Parkes was here a week ago, and a temporary organization was then formed.

Mrs. Parkes, who has just returned from a State Executive Board meeting at Grand Forks, held Tuesday evening, states that there is a big demand for units of the League of Women Voters in several cities in North Dakota. The opportunity for non-partisan political education appeals to the women very much, according to Mrs. Parkes, and there is also a great desire for a thorough understanding of national and international questions.

Mrs. Schaecker Banquet Speaker

Mrs. W. A. Schaecker, president of the local unit of the American Legion Auxiliary, will be one of the speakers at the banquet to be held at the state convention, in Williston, Wednesday evening, June 25. The subject of her toast is "Service."

Delegates who are leaving from this city are: Mrs. A. W. Schaecker, chairman of the delegation, Mrs. Ray Stair, Mrs. L. J. Deacon, Mrs. C. E. Nelson, Mrs. William Falconer, and Mrs. E. F. Trepp, member of the state executive board. The delegates will leave Monday by car.

ENTERTAIN FAMILY

Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Hughes entertained the members of Mr. Hughes' family on Monday evening, at their home on 715 Sixth street, in honor of Mrs. Hughes' birthday. Bouquets of bridal wreath in gilt baskets, and garden flowers formed the decorations. A dainty luncheon was served at the close of the evening. Mrs. Hughes was presented with several gifts in honor of the occasion.

DARK AND COOL

When warm weather arrives, practically every woman yearns for a dress that is both dark and cool and may be worn on the street without looking as if the wearer were bound for a garden party. Here is something that just fills the order. It is of blue georgette crepe with just a suggestion of trimming in the way of white porcelain beads. The pleated apron adds to the tailored effect and gives a certain weight to the sheer material. The sheer neckline and short sleeves insure absolute freedom and comfort.

Yellow Puts Harmony Into Color Groups

BEAUTIFUL COMBINATIONS OF COLOR, IN WHICH YELLOW FORMS THE CHIEF LINK, MAY BE FOUND IN THE CHINTZ DESIGNS OFFERED BY DECORATORS. THE CHINTZ DRAPERIES HERE SHOW HOW JUST THIS FORM OF DECORATION MAY PUT LIFE AND LIGHT INTO A ROOM.

Colors harmonize not only by like-ness but by contrast. For instance, the primary triad of yellow, red and blue makes a harmonious combination, yet there is a closer relationship between yellow and red, the warm, bright colors, than between yellow and blue, a warm and a cold color. Yellow has been found to be the most congenial color in the whole triad. Various shades of this color can be combined to make a harmonious background.

But certain colors in which there is a tint of yellow and a greater amount of blue do not combine well with other colors in which more yellow and less blue are mixed.

For example, olive is a shade of green, in which blue and yellow are the basic colors. Green is a mixture of equal amount of blue and yellow. Yet green and olive do not harmonize.

Blue is Touchy On the other hand, any colors in which yellow and red are basic may be combined with perfect surety that a harmonious background will be obtained. The reason for this is that both yellow and red are warm colors and thus tan or brown, for instance, with their combination of the warm yellow and red basic hues, could not harmonize well with a greenish gray in which there is little yellow.

Yellow, therefore, is the predominant and controlling link in color combinations. Various shades of it can be used together and still make a harmonious whole. It can be depended on to put life and light into a room, where any other colors predominate, and its greatest benefit comes when two colors seem to clash.

An addition of yellow to the cooler and more somber side of the combination may make the whole harmonious.

WIDE BRIM The wide brimmed hat very slightly trimmed with straw or felt is preferred to the small cloche to complement the ruffled summer gown.

THE STATE'S OLDEST NEWSPAPER
(Established 1873)

UNWELCOME ASSOCIATION
It would have been far better for the forces gathered in the St. Paul convention to form a third party to have flatterly deserted the meeting when it was captured by Communists in the opening session, than to have remained in it, as they did. For if the opponents of the Communists can control the convention, there can be no solidarity in the party, and if the Communists control there can be no hope of success. It would have been the part of good citizens, too, for those in the convention, failing to win their opening battle with Communists, to refuse to have anything to do with such forces, openly bent on the destruction of the government.

The third party convention may call forcibly to the attention of the people of the country the fact that the Communist organization is no fanciful creation of the imagination of an over-zealous official, and to demonstrate that the Russian Internationale is actively engaged in promoting its own kind of revolution in this nation. The statement of Secretary of State Hughes regarding the activity of the Soviet in the United States, assailed vigorously at the time and ridiculed by many, may be recalled with much emphasis by many citizens.

HONKERS
Motor vehicle owners in the United States paid over 471 million dollars in taxes last year.
There are only 430,000 miles of surfaced highways in the whole country. So auto and motorcycle owners in one year pay more than $1000 taxes for every mile of good roads.
The hole made in the American pocketbook by autos reminds us of one of the craters on the moon. But the auto is easily three-fourths a necessity, only one-fourth a pleasure device.
It is cheap at any price, considering the time it saves.
Time, after all, is the thing of greatest value among our many forms of wealth.

NOT THE RIGHT SPIRIT
With an election approaching on June 25 complaints are voiced in many quarters against the apparent lethargy of the voters who must decide the issues. This is not a healthy condition. Better that some bitterness creep into the campaign than that there be no interest in it. It is the duty of every citizen to inform himself of the issues before him, of the record and the calibre of the candidates, and then it is his duty to cast his ballot on June 25. Lack of interest on the part of the voters at large is one of the most dangerous conditions in any democratic government.

SCENT
Everything is going wrong. The latest is that flowers are losing their scent. Scientific cross-breeding by florists, to increase the size and color of blossoms, is at the expense of the perfume. The plant energy that naturally would go to make fragrance is used up by artificially stimulated growth.
Nature always exacts her penalty—her price.
The loss of floral fragrance alarms botanists. There are 4300 species of cultivated flowers, but only 420 have an agreeable odor. Of the 308 varieties of violets, only 13 emit perfume.

COBWEBS
Some forms of wealth are beyond price. In the liquor collection that was left by the late J. P. Morgan, are bottles of Napoleon's brandy and a cognac made in 1795. Even a prohibitionist might be tempted to sneak a drink from such a treasure.
In our large cities are plenty of gunmen who would commit murder for one bottle of the 1795 cognac.

STEEL
We still live in the Age of Steel. And this country of ours last year made over three-fifths of the world's pig iron, from which steel is manufactured.
In one recent month Americans made almost as much pig iron as in the entire year 1881.
Pride in country begins with knowledge of its strength and power. In iron and steel, at least, we're more important than all the rest of the world combined.

FUTURE
A bottle holds just so many drinks. The ground contains just so much iron, copper, coal, oil, gas and soil fertility.
We're using up these natural resources fast. They exist in such gigantic quantities that it'll be a thousand years or more before they're exhausted. But humanity has many thousands of years to live. Problem of making a living will become increasingly difficult.

INVESTMENTS
The French people have 5000 million dollars invested in foreign countries, not counting Russian loans which have vanished in smoke. Their income from these sources is 250 millions a year. That's a return of five per cent, which should frighten suckers who think they can get something for nothing. A Frenchman's wisdom in investments amounts to genius.

The children in grammar school don't know much more than their parents did when in high school.

Editorial Review

Comments reproduced in this column may or may not express the opinion of The Tribune. They are presented here in order that our readers may have both sides of important issues which are being discussed in the press of the day.

RECALLING LEWIS AND CLARK

In placing markers on the trail followed by Lewis and Clark around the rapids of the Missouri River in the neighborhood of Great Falls, Mont., the people of that region are paying tribute to one of the greatest adventures in American history. What Great Falls has done should be done all along the line of the explorers' march, so that those who come after may be reminded of the men who blazed the first trail. Fortunately, a full and detailed account of their route is to be found in almost any good library, for the journals of Lewis and Clark are beginning to receive the attention which they deserve. Not that the volumes possess unusual literary merit. Clark appears to have been a matter-of-fact writer, recording little more than bare observations, whereas Lewis was given to elaborate descriptions of scenery and adventures, more interesting for their information than for the pleasure of telling. But the records which these two men left makes most stories of the "Wild West" seem "stale, flat and unprofitable." The volumes may be opened almost anywhere at random and are certain to yield material of interest.

Lewis's entry for June 14, 1805, for example, tells how he set forth on foot to examine the rapids of the Missouri, and was enchanted with the scene. "I came upon a great falls, and above it a long cataract. From a neighboring hill he was able to look out over a vast plain stretching to the foothills. On it roamed great herds of buffaloes. Near by the Missouri spread out into a smooth, even and unruined sheet of water of nearly a mile in width. It was a very beautiful scene, and I was very much pleased to see a flock of geese which feed at pleasure in the delightful pasture on either border." Near by he shot a buffalo, and had hardly discharged his gun when a "large white or rather brown" bear crept up on him and started to charge him. He had not time to load, and the next instant was 300 yards away. He started to run, was followed by the bear, and so decided to take to the water, where he and the bear stopped to look at each other, whereupon the latter turned tail and fled.

In the afternoon, while returning to camp, he noted an animal that at first he took for a wolf; but as he approached, it crouched like a cat about to spring. When he shot it disappeared into a burrow. After examining the tracks he decided it was "of the tiger kind." Some moments later he was charged by three bull buffaloes, which, however, the bear, turned and ran when they got near him. This concluded his encounters with animals of the day—apparently more exciting than usual, for he remarked that they "were the impression on my mind of inchantment."

Although it is clear that Captain Lewis had good imaginative and descriptive powers, and that his tales, it is also plain that he was not a naturalist even by accident. To him animals represented adventures rather than specimens. Otherwise he would not have been content to describe a bear as "white or brown" when it was either a grizzly or one of the smaller brown bears, nor would he have pictured the animal as like a wolf, or one of the cats so loosely that his modern editor surmises it may have been a cougar—more familiarly known as a mountain lion—which is practically never seen in the plains, and is rarely found by a burrow.

Why quarrel with him on this score? His story is a fascinating one, told with the vividness which inheres in all true records of adventure. To be sure, his spelling is more convenient than correct, and his use of capitals distinctly individual. "I felt myself much fortified," he wrote at the end of his day's narrative on that June 14, 119 years ago, "but eat a hearty supper, and took a good night's rest, the weather being warm. I had left my leather over shirt and had worn only a yellow flannel one." It is only necessary to know how many helpings of buffalo steak he had at supper to live with him through his entire day.—New York Times

BY OLIVE ROBERTS BARTON

"The man in the moon is so short and so fat. He can't bend over this way or bend over that. He has not seen his feet since the Fourth of July. But he says that's his shape, so there's new to try. That's what Johnny Jump Up was singing in the moonlight. The Twins woke up and rubbed their eyes. 'Is that you, Johnny?' called Nick. 'Yes, sir, it's me,' said Johnny, doing a handstand on the window sill. 'Are we going on an adventure?' asked Nancy eagerly. 'Are you going to take us on a journey?' 'Yes, I am,' said the funny little fairy. 'That is, if you want to go, and if the timoness is willing.' The Twins scrambled out of bed and slipped into their clothes and put on their magic shoes. As usual, they became so little that their chins nearly touched the ground. 'Come on,' said Johnny Jump Up, 'We have a long way to go and the night is waning. Come.' So they all climbed down the new vine to the magic garden. Johnny Jump Up led the way. And soon they came to the pansy bed. 'Hello,' called a sweet voice, and

FABLES ON HEALTH
WHY WE USE FANS

Out came the ancient palm fans as soon as the hot days came, and all the members of the Jones family soon were frantically waving. Had anyone asked why, the answer very probably would have been: "To keep cool, of course!" Which seems like a very reasonable answer. But the real hygienic value of the hand fan is that it keeps air from stagnating; it provides an artificial means for keeping the air in motion. Where there is no natural movement in the air it should be kept in motion by artificial means. Hence, the electric fan and even the hand fan has a distinct hygienic value. Air should never be allowed to become stagnant, and stagnant air is particularly noticeable in the hot weather. Get rid of it.

TEN MILLION FORDS PARADE

They're off! Ten Million Ford Cars in one parade.

With Ford No. 10,000,000 scheduled to cross the United States on the Lincoln Highway, a genius for figures has worked out the matter of staging a parade of the entire 10,000,000 Model T Fords.

Here's the way he figures it. The road selected is 24,840 miles long circling the earth at the equator. He parks the Fords in one place at the side of the road, sets a pace of twenty miles an hour for the parade and starts the cars at intervals of thirty seconds.

Drivers are to have an eight-hour day the same as that enjoyed by all Ford employees, and are, of course, to have Sundays, Christmas, New Year's and Fourth of July off.

If you were inclined to watch the last car passed, you'd have to stock at your place along the line for thirty-two and a half years.

With all the Fords remaining in line, it wouldn't be long before you would find yourself in the center of a whirling corker of cars, and as the genius has already figured it, if you remained to the finish, and were observant, you probably would have noticed that the first car passed you sixty-seven times before the last or ten-millionth car had left the parking ground.

Furthermore, the figure of the last million, 10,000,000 Ford cars would have been built while you were watching the parade.

GOOD THINGS TO EAT

By Albert Apple

If you like delicious things to eat, you certainly picked out the wrong generation in which to live. The cookery of centuries ago must have been exquisite, judging from the writings of some of the ecstatic eaters.
The king of Bithynia, Asia Minor, on one of his military expeditions, developed a violent craving for an ocean herring. The ocean was far away. So the king's cook took a big turnip, cut it into the shape of a herring, fried it in oil, seasoned it with the powdered grains of a dozen black poppies.
The king swore it was the finest fish he ever ate.
While you've eaten many a fish that tasted as good, it illustrates the phenomenal skill of ancient cooks.
Cooking is sometimes classed as one of the lost arts.

The most famous courses at banquets of rich Romans of old was humming-bird tongues, brought long distances by relays of swift runners. Today they'd use refrigerator cars or airplanes.
Greek chefs of several thousand years ago were able to serve a whole pig, roasted on one side and boiled on the other, so skillfully prepared that the two parts were as distinct as if cooked separately. Tasty? Well, the stuffing was saturated with a dozen or more kinds of wine.

A race of gluttons was the natural development from this marvelous ancient cooking. A past-master of them, named Apicius, specialized at large shrimps. Hearing that the shrimps along the Atlantic coast were much larger, he actually bought a ship, made the trip, was disappointed, and returned in deep melancholy.
Philozenus, asked what he wished most, promptly answered: "A crane's neck, so I would be longer in partaking of my meals."

Those good old days are gone. The last stronghold of eating as a ceremony was the banquet, now being made extinct by prohibition.
Even the traditional Sunday dinner is losing out, in the number of courses if not in taste.
People are beginning to eat scientifically, by calories—and getting the job finished as quickly as possible, gulping.
It's just as well that cookery is becoming a lost art, though, for fine cooks ruin more digestions than good cooks, by enticing to over-eating.

Jack, ear old Jack, met me at the station, Little Marquise, and my first thought, as I caught a view of him towering a little above the crowd looking for me, was how much better looking he was than Karl Whitney. I did not have time to think anything else before I was gathered up in his arms in a great bear like hug—taken completely off my feet.
"Oh, Leslie, I've been so lonely! You'll never go away again," were his first words.
Dear little Marquise, did your kindly lover ever say anything sweeter than that after you had been apart a short while? I am sure he did not.
For answer, I put my arms around his neck and kissed him again. I did not care if the whole world saw us. Jack is mine, my husband, and our love has been cemented with tears and proven by sorrow and grief and trial, as well as by ecstasy and joy.
As he dropped me lightly to my feet he bent down and looked into my eyes. "Darling," he said, "what have you been doing to yourself? You are ever so much better looking even than before you went away."
"I haven't done anything except to bob my hair," I said.
Instantly a change came over Jack's face. "Leslie, don't tell me you have cut off your beautiful hair. You cannot have done anything so foolish."
"Why not, dear. There wasn't a hat in all New York that I could get onto my head and you yourself have just said I was better looking now than I was before."
"I don't care," he remonstrated obstinately. "I loved your hair. You should not have cut it off without asking me. I don't want my wife to look like a slapper. Like a slapper. Oh, I am cooking!"
"I exclaimed, and then I smiled up into his face. 'Jackie, don't let's quarrel the moment I get off the train. Before you spoke I thought you were the handsomest man I have seen since I left, and now you look like a gruff old bear. Every woman, young or old, is bobbing her hair and you don't want me to be old fashioned and out of it all. I don't see why you don't like it. In fact, you did like it or rather you liked me, until you realized what it had made the improvement.'"
"Well, I'm not angry now as much as I am hurt. I didn't think you would do such a thing without getting my approval first."
"You made no great adieu about Sally. Atherton's hair being bobbed." "You must remember, Leslie," said John, "that Mrs. Atherton's hair was bobbed when she came to hair. I certainly never heard of any woman making remarks and explaining to her how very near she had come to losing her job by doing it." I laughed.
"It wouldn't have bothered her much because as you know Dad wants her to come back to him as fully."
Jack had lost his smile and I was almost ready to cry. Such little things make me so unhappy in this world.

Coolidge candidacy to be personal campaign
By Harry B. Hunt, NEA Service Writer
Washington, June 19.—Will the Coolidge candidacy effect a permanent new alignment in the Republican party, or will the shift in leadership and following resulting from his nomination be but a temporary one? This is the question chiefly interesting politically minded Washington today as the president and his henchman squared away for the campaign battle ahead.
For there is no question, but that the Republican party, following the nomination of "The Great One," is in the midst of a "reshuffle" of its ranks. The G. O. P. today are not the "best minds" of four years ago. Just as the quelling of John C. Penrose and Murray Crane were missed by the old regime, so the Cleveland convention, and as Henry Cabot Lodge was ousted into a position of secondary influence, so is the whole Coolidge-Birney personal and machinery of the party organization to be detached, so far as the presidential campaign is concerned.
The Coolidge candidacy will be, to a degree, not qualified by that of any recent aspirant except Roosevelt, a personal campaign.
Just as Roosevelt's appeal to the people was strongly individual, giving him a personal strength exceeding that of his party, so Coolidge's managers believe the appeal of the silent, taciturn man now in the White House outruns the bounds of party and gives him a strength outside of and beyond the grasp of the party when taken as a whole.
In keeping with this view, the Coolidge candidacy will be directed by Coolidge fans. They will be Republicans, of course, but first of all they will be Coolidge Republicans.
The disappearance of John T. Adams, George Lockwood and Fred Upham from places of power in the national committee in the first move in clearing the way for a personal Coolidge campaign, for the personal Coolidge campaign.
The effort is to be to put the Coolidge candidacy at the head of the procession, well but in front, not simply as a part of the general party campaign, but as a personal campaign to win congressional fights and state tickets.

Candidates for Senate and House, if they want to benefit by the Coolidge leadership, will have to come along in the Coolidge following. If they feel that they are stronger than the head of their ticket and are inclined to make their campaigns independently, the result will be on their own heads.

Interestingly enough, however, there are more than a few of the present membership in Congress who expect to do just that thing. Just as Coolidge's managers feel he is stronger than the party itself, these members feel that in individual districts, they are stronger than Coolidge. Those who voted the bonus over the presidential veto, for instance, will claim that as a reason for support November 4. Those who helped put through immigration and tax provisions out at harmony with the Coolidge tax and immigration views will make those acts their chief claim for re-election.

Someone is wrong, of course. Either the Coolidge managers magnify the personal popularity and strength of the president with the rank and file of American voters or the groups within the party which view the Coolidge candidacy with coolness have their glasses on crooked. They can't both be right.

There is openly expressed belief that the old, now rejected leadership of the party, is looking forward not merely with expectation but with actual hope for the defeat of the presidential ticket in November.

This group will work to keep party control in Congress, if possible, but will merely stand by in the hope of recapturing control of the party machinery should the top of the ticket go down to defeat.

A Coolidge victory, however, brings a permanent and new G. O. P. lineup.

Michigan Is Sure To Miss Services Of Sturzenegger

By NEA Service

Ann Arbor, Mich., June 19.—Coach A. J. Sturzenegger has been lost to the University of Michigan football squad. "Sturzy" has accepted a similar position at the University of Southern California. His passing at the Wolverine institution comes with regret to followers of the Maize and Blue eleven.

Sturzenegger, along with Yost and Little, has been the big reason for the success of the Michigan teams in the last few seasons. As tutor of the ends and backfield candidates, he has developed some of the best gridirers the Wolverines have had in years. Goebel, Kirk, Kipke, Steketee, Uteritz, Stager and many other stars of like caliber were helped along by the coaching of Sturzenegger. Kirk, Kipke, Steketee and Uteritz were All-American players.

Sturzenegger, during his Michigan regime, also had the exacting role of scout. He took in practically all the big game where one of the teams was coming. Maize and Blue opponents. His reports on games usually ran many typewritten pages. Every detail was there. His work in this respect made him exceedingly valuable to the Michigan coaching staff. As a scout, Sturzenegger ranks with the best in the country. Sturzenegger is in the banking business in Los Angeles.

BAD HANDS PUT CRACK FIGHTERS ON EASY SEAT
A fighter with brittle hands rarely ever reaches the top.

Ad Stone, fighting marine, one of the best of the light heavyweights, is now laid up with bad hands.

So is Paul Berlenbach, rugged middleweight, whose knockout exploits provided a nine-day sensation in metropolitan rings.

Another young star who has weak hitting weapons is Sammy Mandell of Chicago, a lightweight, whose boxing cleverness is not equalled by any performer in the game.

It will be a tough blow to the game if bad hands keep Stone, Berlenbach and Mandell out of the fancy pictures.

THERE'S MONEY IN RADIO
Gross income of the Radio Corporation of America rose from $4,000,000 in 1921 to more than $26,000,000 in 1923.

During 1923, it is estimated the radio business went above the $250,000,000 mark in total sales. Conservative estimates for 1924 put the total sale figure at $400,000,000.

And this is only an "infant industry."

RICKEY ADMITS HE PULLED A BONER

Brings Back Catcher He Fired Five Years Ago And Now Calls Him Star

By Billy Evans
Wise men change their minds, fools never—or words to that effect. Anyway, Miguel A. Gonzalez is a big league catcher once more. How many ball players have returned to the big circus on the brink of the 40-year mark? Not many.

Yet, Mike Gonzalez, voted the best minor league receiver by every major scout who toured the American Association last season, is back in the National League as first-string catcher for the St. Louis Cardinals.

Branch Rickey, director of the Cardinals, is the one who fits the "Wise men change their minds; fools never change their minds; fools never change their minds."

When Rickey decided to retire Jack Hendricks as manager at the close of the 1918 season and direct his club from the bench, his catching staff was composed of Mike Gonzalez and Frank Snyder.

Shifted Catching Staff
Rickey had his own ideas about catching and catchers. He wanted a man of his own pattern and Gonzalez and Snyder were part of the Miller Huggins regime.

The Louisville Colonels had Vernon Clemmons. Rickey wanted him and he acquired the husky catcher by trading Dixie Davis and Bruno Betzel to the Colonels.

With Clemmons installed as the first-string receiver, Frank Snyder was traded to the Giants for Ferdinand Schupp, while Gonzalez was sold for $10,000 cash.

For five years Clemmons handled the bulk of the catching for the Cardinals. Gonzalez became a lunch warmer for McGraw and later was sent to St. Paul in the American Association.

Reacts Gonzalez a Star
Time brings many changes. Clemmons had lived his life as a big leaguer in Rickey's opinion and another catcher was needed. He sought Mickey O'Neil of the Braves and "Butch" Henline of the Phillies, offering Milton Stock as his bait. Naturally Dave Bancroft refused to part with O'Neil and Fletcher refused to consider any trade proposition for Henline.

What was next? All of Rickey's friends advised him to dicker for Gonzalez, and the Superbas, who had caught the Cuban during the winter from the Cincinnati Reds for $10,000, grabbed the bait.

Thus Gonzalez returned to the manager who had cast him aside five years ago. And Rickey now says that there isn't a catcher in either big league who is more valuable than Gonzalez.

Rickey ought to know as he was a catcher when he was a young star in the American League almost 20 years ago.

Premium Fight Wins Followers

The campaign launched by W. F. Reynolds, state dairy commissioner, against offering premiums such as silverware, by cream buyers, on the ground that it leads to lower prices for cream and butterfat to farmers, is being taken up in other states. The statement of Reynolds, printed in North Dakota papers, is being reprinted in Fremont, Nebraska, and other places where, according to information to Mr. Reynolds, the premium practice has resulted in lower prices paid producers.

COPPER BUSINESS THANKS RADIO

The copper industry in the United States offers its thanks to radio. On the basis of an estimated total of 2,500,000 receiving sets in the country, radio apparatus has consumed 5,000,000 pounds of copper, says a report by the Copper and Brass Research Association, New York.

In five years, the report adds, we may expect as many radio sets as there are automobiles today—about 15,000,000. Raising the use of copper in the next five years to about 5,000,000 pounds annually.

ROTARY HEARS ETHICS TALK AT LUNCHEON

Progress Made in Wholesale Business, Members of Club Are Informed

In the absence of Chairman J. La Rose and Vice Chairman George Will, ex-chairman J. L. Bell graciously consented to preside, which he did with his usual suavity and (for him) unusual laxity in the infliction of fines, at Tuesday's Rotary luncheon. Bob Simpson gave a talk on "Rotary Ethics." He particularly stressed the change in ethics that has occurred in the wholesale fruit business during the last ten years, offering the standardization of sizes in packages as a noteworthy example. The meeting was then turned over to Fred Copelin as chairman of the program committee. Dale Simon, after a spasmodic introduction, talked on "Passing The Buck" as applied to Rotary. J. J. MacLeod next told us of the recent Scout camp at Lake Carlyle, Sask., and the work of the boys while there. Following "Mac," Harry Wagner totally eclipsed Jules Verne by taking the gathering around the world in ten minutes, via piano. After a short talk by "Lou" Craswell, chairman of the Boys Work Committee, the drive for funds for the coming year went over with a bang.

The guests were, Dr. G. M. Constance, who is taking Dr. Robinson's place during the latter's enforced be-absence from the Quain & Ramstad Clinic; Wright Scott, who aided in first installing Rotary in Bismarck; Jim Smith, Rotarian of Minneapolis; and Esigmas Waid, Longfellow, and E. J. Taylor Jr., who are breaking the trip to assignment on the Pacific coast by a visit with E. J. Taylor.

ROTARY HEARS ETHICS TALK AT LUNCHEON

Progress Made in Wholesale Business, Members of Club Are Informed

In the absence of Chairman J. L. Ross and Vice Chairman George Will, ex-chairman J. L. Bell graciously consented to preside, which he did with his usually suavity and (for him) unusual laxity in the infliction of fines, at Tuesday's Rotary luncheon. Bob Simpson gave a talk on "Rotary Ethics." He particularly stressed the change in ethics that has occurred in the wholesale fruit business during the last ten years, offering the standardization of sizes as packages as a noteworthy example. The meeting was then turned over to Fred Capelin as chairman.

After a short talk by "Lou" Craswell, chairman of the Boys' Work Committee, the drive for funds for the coming year went over with a bang.

EXCLUSION IS HELD RIGHT OF UNITED STATES

Secretary Hughes Says It Trespasses no U. S. Obligation

FRIENDLY IN TONE

Secretary of State Reaffirms American Friendship For Japs

Washington, June 19.—The American reply to the Japanese protest against the exclusion provision of the immigration act was made public here last night by the state department simultaneously with its publication through the foreign office in Tokyo. It is cordial and friendly in tone, but at the same time makes it clear that the exclusion provision in no way trespasses upon any written or implied obligation on the part of the United States.

Secretary Hughes points out that Congress was wholly within its right in the enactment of the provision and that the action taken is "mandatory upon the executive branch of the government and allows no latitude for the exercise of executive discretion as to the carrying out of the legislative will expressed in the statute."

The construction generally placed upon the American note is that it conclusively demonstrates the view of the Washington government that the exclusion law is a closed incident and that no attempt to modify or alter its terms is to be expected.

Appreciates Attitude

Secretary Hughes in the note which he prepared with utmost care expresses pleasure over the "friendliness and candor" of the protest communication delivered to him by Ambassador Hanihara, May 31.

"You may be assured of the readiness of this government to consider in the same spirit the views you have set forth," Mr. Hughes said. The note then analyzes the exclusion applicable to all aliens ineligible for citizenship as it is modified by the exceptions contained in the act and points out:

"It will be observed that, taking these exceptions into account, the provision in question does not differ greatly in its practical operation, or in its policy which it reflects, from the understanding embodied in the gentlemen's agreement under which the Japanese government has cooperated with the government of the United States in preventing the emigration of Japanese laborers to this country."

Appreciation of this co-operation in carrying out a "long established policy" is expressed and the communication adds:

"Indeed, the appropriateness of that policy, which has not evidenced any lack of esteem for the Japanese people, their character and achievements, has been confirmed rather than questioned by the voluntary action of your government in aiding its execution."

"The substantial difference between the exclusion provisions and the gentlemen's agreement, the note continues, lies in that President Coolidge described in his statement at the time he signed the immigration bill, as the determination of Congress to exercise "its prerogative in defining by legislation the control of immigration instead of leaving it to international agreements."

"It is not understood that this prerogative is called in question but, rather, your government expressly recognizes that it lies within the inherent sovereign power of each state to limit and control immigration to its own domain," an authority which it is believed the Japanese government has not failed to exercise in its own discretion with respect to the admission of aliens and their settlement within its borders," Secretary Hughes' note continues. It is at this point that the secretary after noting that the President "would have preferred to continue existing arrangements with Japan with such modifications as seemed desirable, asserts:

Not Limited
"This government does not feel that it is limited to such an international arrangement or that by virtue of the existing understanding (the gentlemen's agreement) or of the negotiations it has conducted in the past with the Japanese government, it has in any sense lost or impaired the full liberty of action which it would otherwise have in this matter. On the contrary, that freedom with respect to the control of immigration, which is an essential of sovereignty and entirely compatible with the friendly sentiments which animate our international relations, this government always fully reserved."

The note then quotes the clause from article II of the commercial treaty of 1896 with Japan which stipulated specifically the reservation of the right to control "the immigration of laborers" by law. It adds that when the new commercial treaty of 1911 was under negotiation this clause was eliminated at the instance of the Japanese government because of the existence of the gentlemen's agreement of 1907-8 by which Japan undertook, on her own motion, to restrict such emigration to the United States.

Reference also is made to memoranda exchanged between the Japanese embassy and the state department, dated October 19, 1910, and Jan. 23, 1911, in which the state department acquiesced in the Japanese suggestion for elimination of the clause under discussion but with the stipulation that "the government of the United States does so with all necessary reserves and without prejudice to the inherent sovereign right of either country to limit and control immigration to its own domains or possessions."

On February 8, 1911, the embassy replied in a memorandum which stated that "the imperial government concur in the understanding of the proposal relating to the question of immigration set forth in the above mentioned note of January 23 last."

An Understanding

Secretary Hughes' note points out that this correspondence constituted a "disjoint understanding" between the two governments of the right of each to control immigration and adds that the advisability of dealing with the question by legislative enactment "necessarily remains within the legislative power of this government to determine," a power which Congress now has exercised.

The note advises the Japanese government that since the exclusion provision takes effect July 1, 1924, the Washington government must consider the government of Japan as released from any further obligation under the gentlemen's agreement as from that date. It concludes with the assertion that recognition of the right of each government to legislate in control of immigration "should not derogate in any degree from the mutual good will and cordial friendship which have always characterized the relations of the two countries."

Genius or Money? And Author Made Choice In Death

PETER CLARK MACFARLANE

BY A. H. FREDERICK
NEA Service Writer

San Francisco, June 19.—There can be no compromise between Creative Genius and Economic Materialism.

The suicide of Peter Clark MacFarlane, author and playwright, has proven that.

So declares Dr. Otto G. Freyermuth, psychiatrist.

"MacFarlane's death is a signpost of whitherward we trend," he says. "And if we do not learn from his lesson—and from hundreds of similar ones around us almost daily—we will degenerate into a nation of comparative mental dullards."

Dr. Freyermuth, specialist in neurotic and mental phases, points out the absolute incompatibility of genius flourishing to full growth in an infertile field of money madness.

For of all men the especially talented mentally are most susceptible to outside influences, he believes.

"To be a genius a man must be of imperfect balance," he asserts. "It is only by sounding the depths that the heights can be reached. The man must believe in his mission and become absorbed in it."

"When he finds this mission—considered holy by him—hindered, since midnight, according to reports to the sheriff. Many shots were fired, it was said, and four dynamite blasts were set off near the tipple.

The Brady mine was reopened recently on a non-union basis, after union miners refused to return to work under the scale of 1917.

POSTAL WORKERS QUIT PLACES

Montreal, Canada, June 19.—The order supposedly set by officials of thwarted (so it seems to him) by mere petty economic obstacles, one of two must suffer—the man or his genius.

"This was the case with MacFarlane. He had set his hand to the plough; he had nominated himself to be an improver of mankind through his writings. And when he felt caught in the system, he chose the solution as he saw it."

Dr. Freyermuth views the present as a topsy-turvy age.

"Highest premiums," he says, "are being placed upon non-productive activities while the teachers and builders of humankind go along unrecognized."

He admits he is not ready with an answer to the problem. But the solution, he insists, must provide for a "natural growth of genius, disassociated with the problems of existence."

"Unless we take active steps to insure this," the doctor explains, "we can only hope that the pendulum will swing from the mental bankruptcy to a new Renaissance, born of the very evil which it will overcome."

"But this is problematical. The safest course is to take steps that will insure a non-revolutionary but effective solution of it all."

COMMUNISTS ARE INCLUDED IN NEW PARTY

Way Is Left Open For Their Organizations To Join as Such, in Third Party

TO SELECT A TICKET

Everything Provisional, Depending on Outcome of Cleveland July 4 Conference

St. Paul, June 19.—(By the A. P.)

Adoption of a platform and provisional national ticket was before the new National Farmer-Labor party convention for what its leaders hoped would be the final session.

This stage was reached in a session which lasted until midnight last night, the greater part of the evening being consumed in a successful fight by the farmer delegates from Minnesota to delay the adoption of the platform.

Formation of the party went through practically without debate when the convention learned that the Communists had given up their plans for immediate launching of the national organization. This left the plan fathered by William Mahoney, the St. Paul union laborite, the only one in the field.

It was modified, however, by inclusion of the provision that the national committee of the new party should include two members from each national political group affiliated with the organization. This opened the gateway for representation, as such, of the Workers Party and the Federated Farmer-Labor party organization headed by William Z. Foster and C. E. Ruthenberg, who openly announced in the convention that they were Communists.

Whatever ticket is nominated by the convention will be provisional, the national committee which the convention agreed to organize, having been empowered to negotiate with other Farmer-Labor organizations in an effort to agree upon conditions.

This left the way open for an endorsement of Senator Robert La Follette if he decides after the July 4 conference at Cleveland to run as an independent candidate.

The Senator blocked all thought of a direct endorsement by this convention last night when he sent word that he would not consider any action in his behalf by the new party. Word of this was passed around the convention but was not announced openly.

Provisional Basis

The new party is to start out on a provisional basis, with state and national conventions set for some time after the November election. The 1924 campaign is to be devoted to organization work in the state under the general plan of "enrolled membership in Farmer-Labor cooperative organizations and district political units," used in Minnesota.

The organization committee declared its creation should be "free from any alliance with or subject to the control of any organization existing in or controlled by a foreign country." It was equally emphatic in declaring the party apart from any organization serving the interests of those who profit from the private ownership of the great monopolies.

Both the Republican and Democratic parties were placed in this class. Economic, industrial and occupational groups were declared the proper foundation unit upon which the structure might be built.

CONSTIPATION OVERCOME

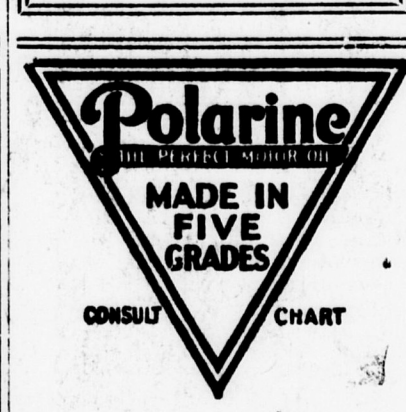

The use of FOLEY CATHARTIC TABLETS will bring speedy relief from constipation if taken promptly.

They are purely vegetable and act on the liver. Mr. John D. McComb, Lucas Co. Home, Toledo, Ohio, writes: "Have used FOLEY CATHARTIC TABLETS in severe cases of constipation to which I am subject and found them beneficial." FOLEY CATHARTIC TABLETS are easy to take, leave no unpleasant after effects. Try them.—Adv.
